whassup homegirl!

The time has come for us to take that mighty step. We've been through a lot of years at the madhouse together I know you'll make big money. I remember when you and I, Dawn and Tera got so loaded at the beach. (Ike Beach). That's what we have. We've had a lot of good times together this summer and we'll get blitzed. Maybe we'll go to a movie or something. You're one of my tightest homegirls you don't want to lose contact with you and I really don't want to make it work with you much-time-to-much-time but I haven't had sure we'll see each other after long years of party or to smoke it up) and I really don't want to lose contact with you and I really don't want to make it work with you much-time-to-much-time but I haven't had sure we'll see each other after long years of (even though I have to see families. ☺ HER HER Remember your homegirls at school and smoke it up) and I really don't want to lose contact with you and I really don't want to make it work with you much-time-to-much-time but I haven't had sure we'll see each other after long years of with close friends. A Splash of Color

As days became shorter and the ocean water got cooler it meant that another school year was just around the corner. In the mail we recieved registration dates and a calender of events for the fall.

Finally, on September 12, 1983, over 1800 students poured into Madison. Some had been there before, some were seasoned veterans, and some were in awe of the size of the school. They were in the big time now. Yet all talked of summer happenings; Friday night parties, Saturday softball games, and Sunday surf. Some had worked all summer and they weren't exactly anxious to go back to school. They'd rather keep working, making money, and having fun.

Not to say that school wasn't fun, because those who wanted fun, found it in the many activities, clubs, and athletics that Madison had to offer. More students got involved in athletics than in any other extra-curricular activity. Some sports were dropped because of a lack of funds. The atheletes of those sports were obviously disgruntled. Maybe you were a member of a particular club. The ski club returned for its second year, while some others such as Model United Nations and the drama club have existed for many years.

Some of us came to school just to learn, with the philosophy that school is a stepping stone; each year bringing us closer to our goals. While others just squeaked by; each year bringing them closer to the freedom which they desire.

More Vivid

No matter who you were or what approach you took to school, you were apart of a unique Madison year. A year that introduced us to a new principal and a new administration, a new ASB with new ideas to make Madison a more enjoyable school for all. You were also apart of a unique year in general, in a nation that readied itself for another federal election. It was also a year with an extra day, and a year that had been predicted to be tragic in George Orwell's famed novel "1984".

As you can see there were many outlooks, opinions, and ideals that existed at Madison this year. They all added to the color of our school color, not only in the sense of red or blue, but in feeling and attitude. The objective of this yearbook is to combine all forms of this color, show you the parallels and distinguish the differences. Because Madison has so much feelings, attitude, change, and brilliance; so many opinions, points of view and angles, there is only a small part of that color in this book. A SPLASH!!

The rest will be kept forever in your memories.

Student Life

There is no doubt that every student at Madison did something to keep them busy during the long school year. Obviously, a student's life does not start and end at school. Although the things students got involved in varied from dances to plays, concerts, and games, the basic purpose of these things remained the same, and that was to have some fun, and, at the same time ease the tension of school.

Even though San Diego is affected little by the change of seasons, the things students did changed with them. In September, students were still soaking up the sun and riding the waves. As fall came, students began to leave the beaches, and running, bicycle riding, and weekend football games became more prevalent. With the turn to winter, students began to flock to the ski slopes. Others packed it in and read or watched television. It was spring and students played baseball, softball, and anticipated warmer weather. Now, summer is here and it is once again time to get out in the

Homecoming

Victory!

That tremendous feeling of victory filled each person present at Madison on Homecoming Night, November fourth, nineteen-eighty three; an event that provided excitement, suspense and color. Madison proved victorious. The ability and talent of the football team came through with a victory over Patrick Henry. Victory also touched the hand of Sonia Jackson as she was crowned Homecoming Queen of nineteen-eighty three. Victory followed tradition as the Senior Class float was announced the winner. On a sorrowful note victory, in a sense, came to the late George Hoagland as his achievements were honored and Madison High School Stadium was renamed the George Hoagland Regional Stadium.

As the whistle blew, the football team exerted every ounce of energy and effort needed to defeat the powerful opponent, Patrick Henry. Steve Kreger, making two crucial fumble recoveries, started the Warhawk victory drive. Quarterback, Marty Lewis, executed key plays that chalked up points on the Madison scoreboard. Outstanding blocking and hardhitting tackles came from the Madison defense. Kicker Robby Stark made a crucial tackle that undoubtedly would have resulted in a Patrick Henry touchdown. Such effort gave Madison a Homecoming victory of nine points to four over Patrick Henry.

Halftime entertainment, provided by the Drill Team and Marching Band, was well organized and colorful. Batons twirled and flags waved to the accompaniment of trumpets and drums. Starting the mini-parade was the Sophomore float. The theme was "Music," and it was excellently portrayed with sophomores dancing on and around the float to a quick soul beat. Next were the juniors. Their float hosted a huge replica of a digital clock with the time set at 19:99. The theme was "Party till it's 19:99!" Ending the parade of floats were the seniors. A large rainbow straddled an '84' to mark their theme, "End of the Rainbow."

Riding around the track in vintage automobiles came the queen nominees and their escorts. Looking radiant, Queen nominees Marcella Quijencio, Judy Flor, Diane Quinlan, Dawn Emert and Sonya Johnson waited anxiously upon the platform. Finally, the tension was broken; Sonya Johnson was crowned Homecoming Queen for 1983-84 by the reigning Queen, Marjorie Burton.

Marking the receiver from Patrick Henry, Madison's Oatha Jackson dives in to complete the tackle.

All lined up, alumni cheerleaders of the Madhouse join together with Michelle Burner and Wilma Warhawk (Louise Stevenson) to sing and shout for a Madison victory.

Halloween

They're Here

Characters from Zorro to an egg invaded Madison's campus on Monday morning, October the thirty-first. Lots of school spirit was shown by the students throughout the day; although lunch time proved to be the big event when the A.S.B. held a costume contest. The contest was based on the most original, scariest, and funniest of all costumes. Suzanne Peterson was voted most original, dressed as a 1950 Car Hop Girl. Bruce Adams and Othello Lewis were voted the scariest. Both of them were dressed as women. Heidi Lucas was voted the funniest, dressed as one of the 7 dwarves. All winners were awarded T-shirts and a gift certificate from the Hawkshop.

Halloween proved to be a bundle of fun for all who participated as well as those who didn't. It is good to have one day out of the year for everyone to change from their original selves into different creative characters.

Taking time out from the competition is Suzanne Peterson, our 1950 car hop girl.

Springing up from Madison's own garden are Judy Flor and Eileen Velasco.

Fashion

Tongue Twisting Fashions

Pearls, pumps, purple lipstick, pink shirts, polka dot shirts, plaid shirts, and plastic shoes; what do all of these items have in common, besides beginning with the letter "P"? These are items that the girls at Madison have worn this year. What about the guys? Well, their letter was "S": sweats, sweaters, slacks, striped shirts, sun glasses, and shorts (bermudas). The short sleeved shirts with emblems on them were popular. The emblems ranged from penguins to polo ponies. Some emblems were covered by buttons of groups like Madness and The Stray Cats.

The biggest difference this year was the colors. The motto was the brighter the better. Turquoise and pink tended to be the loudest, although red was never quiet. One can't forget about black. Black made the strongest come back. It was the color that went with everything. It tended to look dressier than the other colors, especially when paired with black pumps and gold jewelry.

As the colors of the girls clothes got brighter, the guys tended to get more dressy. The preppy fashion seemed a bit more popular with the male students at Madison. Penny loafers and Top-Siders were occupied by many feet. There were far more ties, sweaters, and slacks, than expected. These items made up the preppy and GQ look. While the GQ and preppy look expanded more, the bermudas, OP's. and Levi 501's still ruled. One can't forget the many muscle shirts worn. Really, the girls couldn't forget the many muscle shirts worn.

It's easy to say what the students wore this year, but rarely are the reasons why given. There's no question that one of the most influential movies this year was Flashdance. The countless ripped sweatshirts, and mini-skirts teamed up with pumps, gave it away. Although movies and magazines played a big part in fashions, they tended to produce trends. There was a fashion this year that definitely was not a trend. It was more of a lifestyle. Music played a big part in this fashion. It doesn't depict a different style, it is more a tool of expression. You may call it mod or punk, but whatever you call it, this England rooted lifestyle has definitely made an impact on Madison students. This fashion ranges from flowing skirts, and leather belts, to dyed, short, spiked hair. This individualistic expression may be different, but should always be respected.

No one can really say what the different fashion will be next year, but they will never be boring.

The pumps, miniskirt, and ripped sweatshirt, worn here by Shannon Conner, can only lead one to think of one thing, Flashdance. The movies' popularity influenced fashion at Madison.

Shoes play a big part in fashion at Madison. Some of the popular shoes included: penny loafers, Top-Siders, vans, pumps, and plastic shoes.

Some Madison students' style of dressing can't be categorized. Here Kim Schmit, Duane Chappelle, Malin McLeod, Laura Kesler, Tammy Surber, Sandra Chambers, and Becky Hutton, each express their individualism.

The GQ look is characrerized by thin ties, vested sweaters, and brighter colors, demonstrrared here by Pat Rogers.

Tricia Loftus, Amy Quatman, and Louise Stevenson, besides making Pat Rogers blush, show the popular dress designs of stripes and plaids.

Pep Rallies

Warhawks Show Spirit

Pep rallies at Madison were just one of the many ways the students showed their spirit. The rallies have become, throughout the year, the most successful and energetic happenings on campus.

The first pep rally that sparked off the year introduced the fall sports. Our Madison High School Marching Band performed one of their routines used in competitions and the Varsity Cheerleaders executed their routines that will be seen during the year. They also held up banners when a sport was introduced and led the crowd in a spirited yell. This pep rally that was held during fourth period, had the entire student body attending, and as stated by Mr. Swain, "is the most enthusiastic group I have seen in a long time."

There were other pep rallies that supported the Warhawk spirit, such as Homecoming, which had male cheerleaders and female football players, and the beginning of winter sports like Basketball, Baseball, Wrestling, and Track.

Even though there were not as many pep rallies as most of the students would have liked, the rallies that we did have showed just how spirited the "Warhawks" really are.

ASB Ball

"Always And Forever"

Always and Forever was the theme and "Time Will Reveal" was the theme song for the ASB Ball this year. The ball was held in the Corillion Room at the El Cortez on February 4th, where it was decorated with the colors white, pink, red and silver.

The music was featured by DJ Classé and the band, Parteé. They played soul, rock and new wave music to satisfy everyone's preferences. And there was hors d'oeuvres and punch to satisfy their palates.

Marcella Quijencio was announced as the ASB Ball queen with Michelle Burner and Gina Atkinson as the junior and sophomore attendants. The other nominees for ASB Ball queen were Sheri Smith and Dawn Emert, for junior attendant were Shannon Conner and Sylvia Romero and for sophomore attendant it was Lisa Jackson and Pam Maidens. For many, like Marcella commented, "This was a night that will be remembered Always and Forever."

Smiling as usual, Michelle Burner and Rod Finney are happy to find out Michelle has won the title of Junior Attendant.

Formal photos together were taken all through the dance. Waiting to have their pictures taken are Bruce Adams and Kathryn Binks.

Troy Buck, Tommy McQuinn, Julie Oro, and Patricia Vivas take a break from the dance floor to get something to eat. The food consisted of marinated meatballs, marinated chicken, fruit, two different kinds of cake, and a punch fountain.

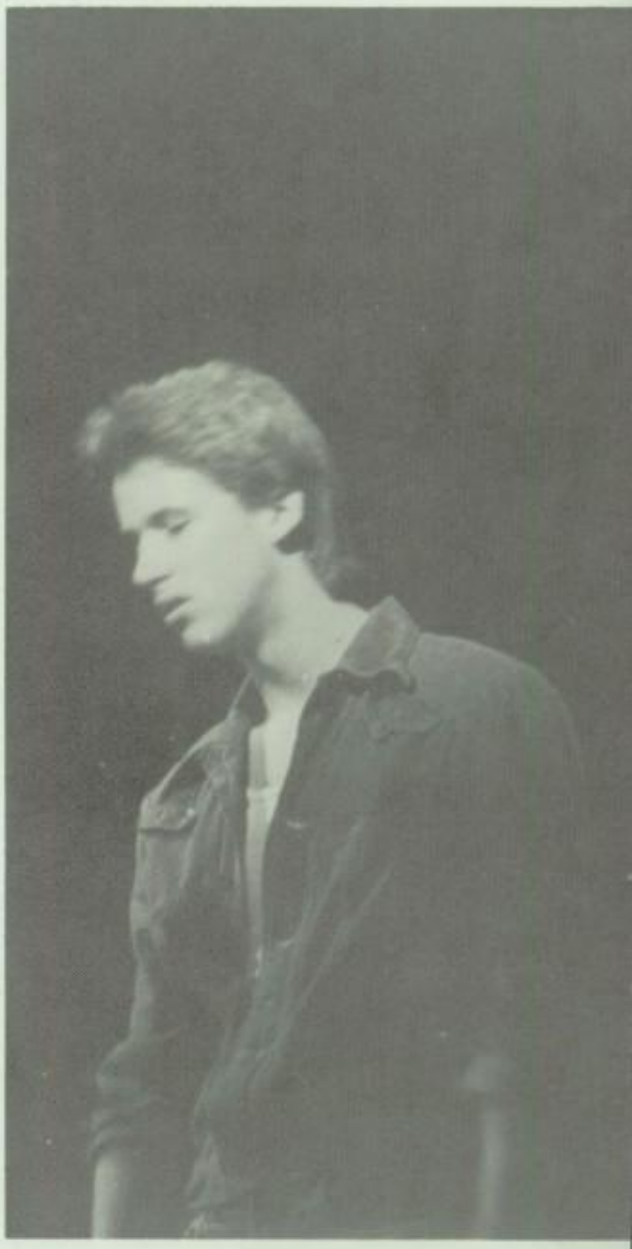
Fall Production

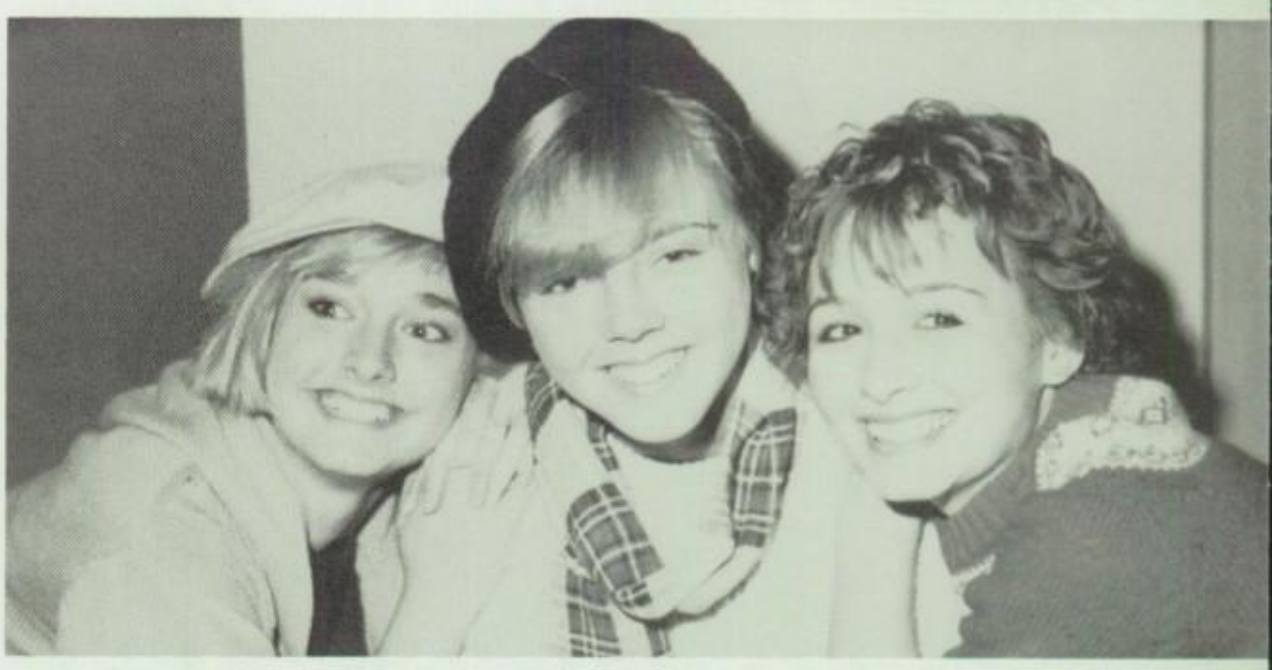
Teachers Get Involved

Madison's fall production of Dino, by Reginald Rose, did more than bring together a fine team of Madison actors and actresses. For the first time it united faculty and students as one, in a memorable performance. The six main adult characters played by faculty were made up of Miss Ballardo (Mrs. Falcaro); Mr. Dean Hickman (Mr. Falcaro); Mr. Geoffrey Hollenbeck (Mr. Mandel); Mrs. Candyce Shauer (Miss Haines); Mr. Keith Robinson (Mr. Sheridan) on December 8th and 9th; Mr. Jim Robinson (Mr. Sheridan) on December 7th; and principal, Mr. Charles Raleigh (Mr. Mikula). The faculty's participation in Dino had a positive effect on the students by narrowing the gap between students and faculty with the interaction between students and faculty on a different level. "They weren't just authority figures they became friends," said Amie Rabello, who played Jackie. They all gave a great performance, especially Miss Ballardo as Dino's very volatile mother, and Mr. Hickman as Dino's hot-tempered, unstable father, whose characters were so unlike themselves.

It wasn't just the faculty's participation in Dino that made it special, but it was also Shawn Moran's realistic portrayal of Dino Falcaro, that made these characters something students could relate to.

The play took place in the James Street Settlement House in modern day times. Dino had just been sent there after getting out of a reform school, where he was sent after being an accomplice in a murder at the age of twelve. The play revolved around Dino's adapration to his new environment and with the help of Mr. Sheridan, the psychotherapist, played by Mr. Jim Robinson and Mr. Keith Robinson, Dino was able to accept himself and others. Roger Whitney played Tony, Dino's younger brother, who tried to follow in Dino's footsteps; Sylvia Baer, played Shirley, who brought out Dino's gentle side; Amie Rabello as the frank Jackie, who helps bring Dino and Shirley together; Michele Moore as Sylvia; Kim Tatrano as Della; Jessica Burger as Pat; and Kim Snyder as Bea. Other cast members included: Gina Atkinson, Chris Cable, Theresa Jennings, Patty Jones, Bonny Jones, and Angie Christenson as "the Girls;" Tress Balch, Ingo Bentrott; Robert Huffman; Jeff Spitzer; James Brandt; Marty Lewis, and Chris Wehsener as "The Guys."





Dino (Shawn Moran) expresses depression and withdrawal from others.

Some of the people Dino meets at the Settlement House included Angela Tilley, Nettie Kasch, and Bonny Jones, who portray "Bops."

Mr. Falcaro (Mr. Hickman), and Mrs. Falcaro (Miss Ballardo), in one of their more calm moods, as Tony (Roger Whitney) proudly wears his Silk Hats jacket.

Jackie (Amie Rabello) the talkative secretary, thinks of a plan to get Sylvia and Dino together.

The underpriveleged Mr. Mikula (Mr. Raleigh) asks Miss Haines (Mrs. Schauer) if there were any winter coats donated.

Sylvia (Michele Moore), Della (Kim Tairano), and Pat (Jessica Burger), potray the "In Crowd," at the Settlement House.

Lunch

Having A Good Time

It's 11:24 and thirty seconds. The teacher is lecturing to a class of inattentive students. All eyes, except the teacher's, are fixed upon the wall clock. It's ten seconds before the lunch bell rings. The students count down; . . ., 4, 3, 2, 1. "Ring". The bell sounds. Hundreds of students rushed out of their classrooms dashing for the lunchcourts, looking forward to that thirty-five minutes of relaxation and fun. Everyone was planning to have a good time. Where did they go? What did the students at Madison do this year for lunch?

A survey pertaining to lunch time activity was given to students, thus providing a variety of answers to those questions.

The majority of the students, approximately ninety percent, did not eat in the cafeteria. The reason for this we leave up to your own imagination. There was a small minority, about ten percent of the students, that did eat in the cafeteria and they lived to tell about it so the food in the cafeteria couldn't have been that bad. If they did eat in the cafeteria or the outside line most people bought a combo or some kind of beverage (milk, grape drink), or something sweet such as brownies, cakes, or cookies.

About half of the twenty percent of the students that didn't go off campus for lunch brought their own lunch to school and ate on campus. They picked a spot on the lawn at the beginning of the year and they usually sat there with their friends every lunch period for the rest of the year. Some talked with their friends and had a good time. Others roamed the lunchcourt and the halls chatting with the friends they met. Others weren't so relaxed. They had to head to the library and finish fifth period's homework.

The average student usually left campus four or five times a week. So where did the eighty percent of the students who went off campus go to eat? In the lunch survey taken, it was asked what were the five most popular places to go for lunch. First place clearly went to Square Pan Pizza. Second place, by a narrow margin, went to My Yogurt Place. Third place was not so easy to tabulate. It was a very close running between Burger King, AM-PM Mini Mart, and Home. In tabulating the votes, Burger King finally came out ahead and claimed a spot as the third most popular place to go for lunch. You may have wondered what were some of the other places mentioned for lunch. Many were submitted but here are a few: Taco Bell, Target, Whistle Stop, Carlos Murphies, The Madison bleechers, the San Diego Yacht Club, and a host of other wonderful and bizarre places.

This year though, Madison High students seemed to enjoy the one lunch period. They had a lot of fun going off campus or staying on campus with their friends. This year everyone was just having a good time.

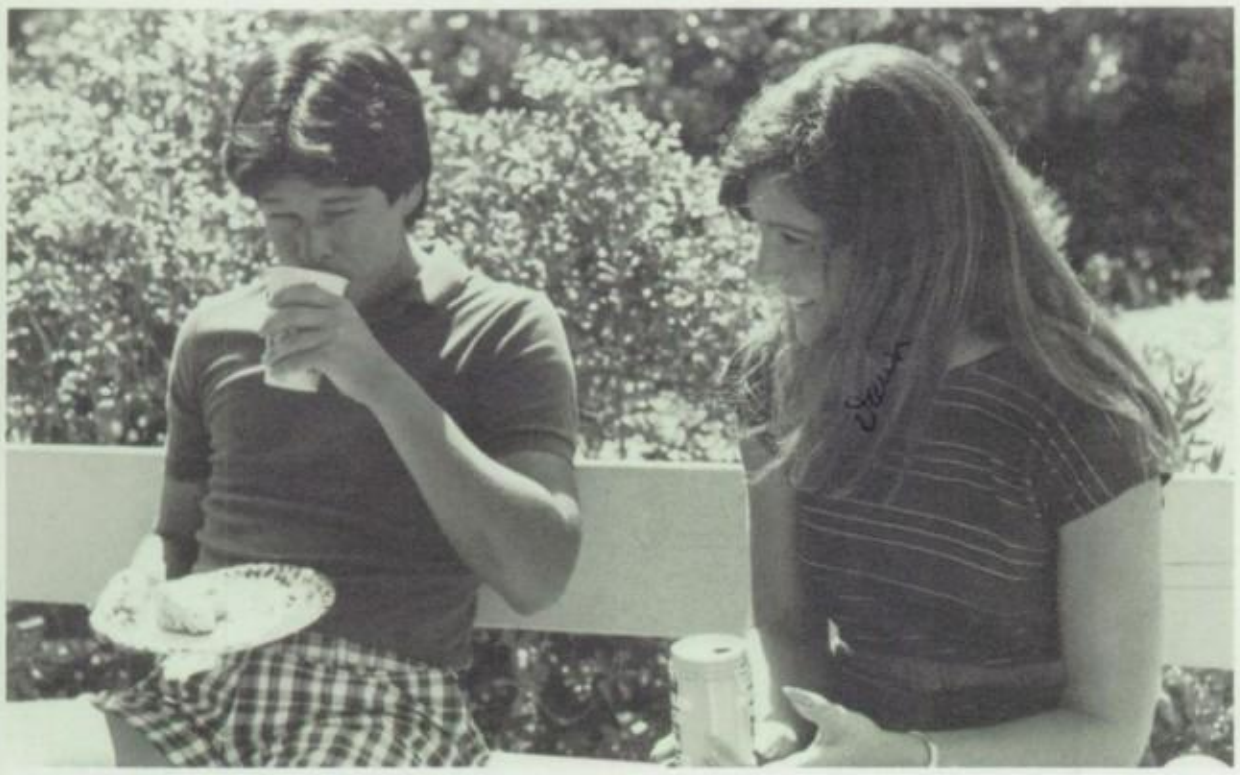
Sitting with his friends on the lawn during lunchtime, Richard Kim has a mouthful while he devours his lunch.



Many of the students bought their lunch from the cafereria. Dan Villaluz and Dawn Emert eat their school lunches together.

AM-PM was the third most popular spot for lunch. People picked up a quick snack and talked with friends.

In a lunch survey, Square Pan Pizza was voted most popular place to go for lunch. Georgie's and Whistle Stop were among the many places mentioned in the lunch survey.

Littlechap's Life Winter Production

The 1984 Winter Production of the Madison Theatre Arts Guild was "Stop the World . . . I Want to Get Off", which was written in 1961 in Leonard Bricusse and Anthony Newley. The musical was produced under the direction of Mr. Dennis Hollenbeck, stage manager Kathy Wells, choreographer Nanon Tygett, and vocal coach Ken Caren. The music was provided by members of the school band, under the direction of Mr. Dean Hickman; along with pianist Dorothy McMahon. "It was a great experience that brought us all closer together", says cast member Alisa Perry.

"Stop the world . . . " takes place in England during the life of Littlechap (Cort Huckabone) from birth until death. Once Littlechap is born, the play moves very rapidly through his adolescence into adulthood. Upon graduating from school, he finds a job as a tea-boy in a factory. It is not long before he becomes involved with the boss' typically English daughter, Evie (Alisa Perry). She becomes pregnant, forcing them to get married, leaving Littlechap feeling trapped, or lumbered. Their first child is their daughter, Susan. (Jessica Burger) When Evie becomes pregnant again, Littlechap complains about his salary, and is given a promotion-a transfer to Sludgepool; a factory where the atmosphere is dismal and dreary. However, he soon changes this atmosphere to one of great productivity, which he credits to Evie. Littlechap is desperately hoping for their next child to be a son, but is disappointed with the arrival of their second daughter, Jane (Michele Moore). Unhappy with his life at home, and with the news of Evie's third pregnancy, Littlechap is sent to Moscow on business, where he meets a Glorious Russian woman named Anya (Kim Taitano). He reveals to Anya his unchanging desire for a son to carry on his name. When he returns home, Evie gives birth to their third child, a son. The son unfortunately dies, leaving Littlechap feeling very depressed, empty, and unhappy. The domestic help that Evie has hired is a young German girl named Ilse (Gabriella Gutierrez, Suzanne Peterson), who is in England to conquer the English language. His advances towards Ilse are strongly rejected, and he remains unhappy. He then is sent on a business trip to New York where he becomes acquainted with the All-American female, Ginnie (Shelli Lane). While in America, he hears from Susan, forcing him to return to England, only to discover that she is pregnant, and must get married. To this Littlechap replies "If it runs in the family, there's nothing you can do about it." Bored with his life as a high-class businessman, thoughts of a life in politics fill Littlechap with new hope. His venture into politics is successful, as he is voted into Parliament, but it is not long before he realizes that if he does not slow down, he will die, and with this horrifying thought, decides to retire. In his retirement, he finds plenty of time to think, and admits to Evie that he has wasted her life, and that she should have never have fallen in love with him. Evie, without doubt, disagrees, but unfortunately these are her last moments of life, leaving Littlechap alone with nothing but memories. He realizes that most of these memories are not fond ones, and confesses everything to Evie, even if she is dead. He admits that he was only ever really in love with himself, and has been a fool, disregarding his success as both a businessman and a politician. His daughter Jane gives birth to a son, and when death starts to take over, an enraged Littlechap screams "Take me instead!", bringing life to his grandson, and casting him with death. This completes the circle of life for Littlechap, who points out that a circle has no beginning, and no end, and the events begin all over again, with him as a baby.

The remainder of the cast was the multi-talented acting troupe (Pat Ambrosio, Toni Gomez, Zorina Morton, Tina Riggs, Daniel Sky). The set for the production was designed by Dave and Sharon Allen, and was constructed by Mr. Hollenbeck's sixth period stagecraft class.

Although many Madison students felt that the storyline of this play was not appropriate for a high-school audience, it did show a great deal of talent and dedication which led to a personal success for everyone involved in its production. In the words of lead cast member Cort Huckabone, "I really enjoyed working with this cast, and had a great time. We had fun and also worked hard. There are some phrases that we will always remember, like "What the Haell", and "Get outta town". There are many memories we share, but I think I can sum them up in two words: Very festive. I'd just like to thank everyone who has worked with me, and especially Mr. Hollenbeck. It was great!"

Academics

Honored For Academics

Started in 1948 for Los Angeles area high schools, Bank of America's Achievement Awards has developed into one of the most comprehensive and highly respected student award programs in the nation.

Today, it includes more than 300,000 graduating seniors from virtually every high school in California with annual cash awards exceeding $345,000, including thirty $2,000 top awards. It is structured to honor student achievement on as broad a level as possible with identical awards made in separate academic categories and in ten independent geographical divisions covering the entire state.

The selection process begins at the individual schools where faculty committees select their outstanding students in up to thirteen specific academic fields. Each student receives a certificate of achievement. The committee then chooses its top students in each of three general study fields: Applied and Fine Arts, Liberal Arts and Science and Mathematics. While scholastic ability is a major factor in the selections, participation in school and community activities also is evaluated to reflect a student's total accomplishments.

General field winners at each school receive personally engraved Achievement Award plaques and become eligible for the programs next level of competition, the Zone Selection Event.

Here, winners in each category from approximately twelve neighboring schools participate in group discussions on topics related to their particular study field before a judging panel of educators and civic leaders.

The zone winners are chosen by the results of the group discussion, a written statement, as well as academic records and levels of participation in extracurricular and community activities. First place wins $2,000, second $1,000, third $750, and fourth $500.

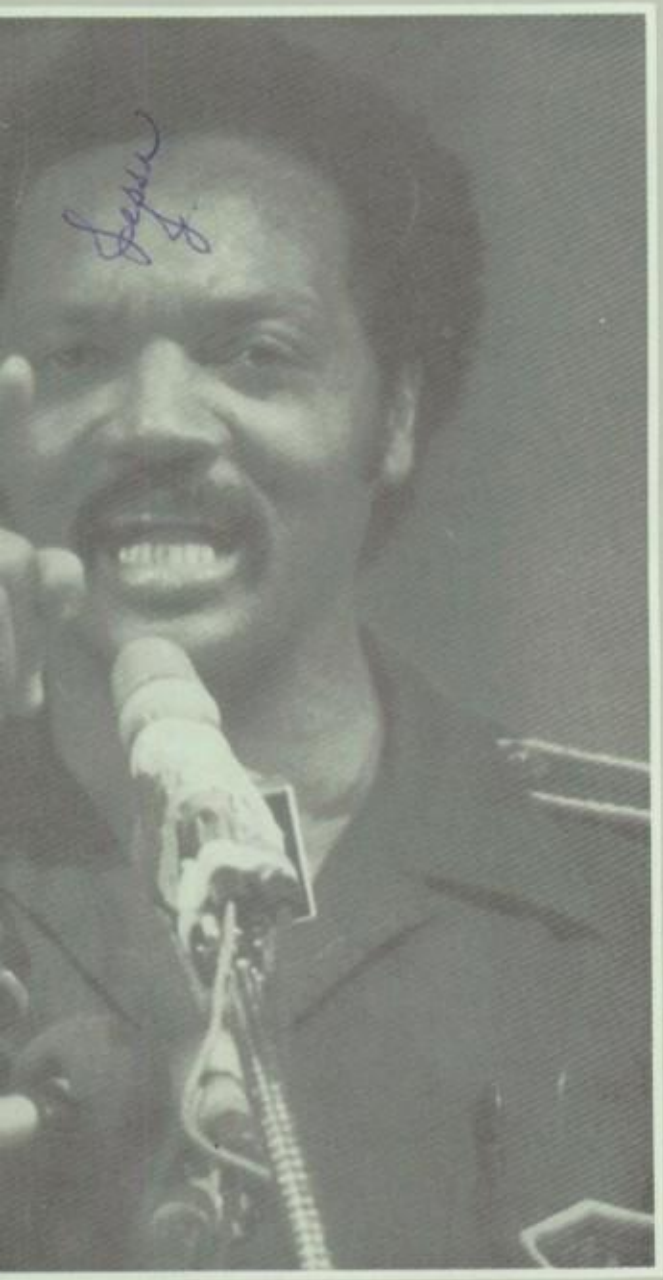
News



Reminiscing about the school year of 1983-84 one might recall the school dances or football games, and also the not so fond memories of failing tests after studying long hours the night before, or even receiving your report card to discover the grades were not as good as expected. As memories are recollected, we begin to realize that time does indeed fly by, and soon another year has passed away with the advent of a new year just around the corner. The worldwide events that took place in 1983-84 ranged from the discovery of an injection for heart attack victims, to the shocking loss of the America's Cup to the Australians and will be remembered as much as our memories of the 83-84' school year. The events which occured in nature, education, medicine, world politics and sports, all contributed to the growth of our personal lives, as well as the growth of our country, making the calender years 1983 and 1984 important and therefore, memorable.

In 1983 the weather was the worst it had been in forty years, due to worldwide volcanic activity and the disruption of the flow of currents and tradewinds in the Pacific. Extreme storm conditions were experienced firsthand by San Diego beach front owners and businesses as the tide rose and the powerful waves brought about flooding and destruction of buildings. The weather was not only unpleasant, but the sewage that was poured forth into San Diego waters through the Tijuana sewage pipes resulted in the repeated closing of local beaches. Nineteen-eighty four brought undesirable weather to many midwestern states. Extremely low temperatures devastated the midwest, while in San Diego, the Santa Ana winter days resulted in crowded beaches and resembled the hot, lazy days of summer.

As superintendent Thomas Payzant took control of the educational curriculum of the San Diego City Schools, a "Back to Basics" program was established. The program required all students involved in any extracurricular activity to have a minimum 2.0 grade point average. The program also required the students to have a minimum of two hours of homework per night, and also entailed reading a book a month. A step towards educational reform was also taken by a compromise made by Governor Deukmejian and the legislature, restoring $96 million to the funding of Community Colleges. In return for this restoration, a fifty dollar tuition per semester was required of all students. This was the first monetary requirement issued to students in the seventy four year history of the Community College Systems.

People like Payzant and Governor Deukmejian contributed to the outcome of educational reform, while in space technology, a name that could not have been overlooked was Sally Ride. Ride became the first woman to venture into outer space, traveling with four male crewmates. Aboard the space shuttle Challenger, Ride and the other crewmembers spent six days in space conducting twenty one experiments and launching two satellites.

The excitement that aroused Americans by Sally Ride's travel into space was also apparent in the sports world. In football, a new league was formed. The U.S.F.L. played during the summer season with an eighteen game schedule, compared to the sixteen game schedule in the winter season of the N.F.L. During baseball season, the Baltimore Orioles won the World Series, and the game of baseball lost two of its greatest players. After twenty seven seasons, Carl Yastrensky of the Boston Red Sox retired, along with the all-time catcher for the Cincinnati Reds, Johnny Bench. Ranked number one in woman's tennis, Martina Navratilova successfully reclaimed the prestigious Wimbledon title. Indoor soccer gave birth to a young, talented team. The San Diego Sockers were explosive and invincible, defeating great teams to seize their first M.I.S.L. Championship. Although the Clippers struggled through the basketball season after numerous defeats, the Philadelphia 76'ers, led by Dr. J, defeated the Los Angeles Lakers to capture the N.B.A. Championship. Perhaps the greatest victory, (or defeat) of 1983 transpired when the Australians won the America's Cup, a worldwide sailing event, breaking the American's 132 year winning streak. As the Los Angeles Summer Olympics of 1984 began to unfold on T-Shirts, mugs, pencils and just about everything with the Olympic ring logo, hope was established for male athlete of the year Carl Lewis, and female athlete of the year Mary Decker, as well as for the 1984 U.S. Olympic teams.

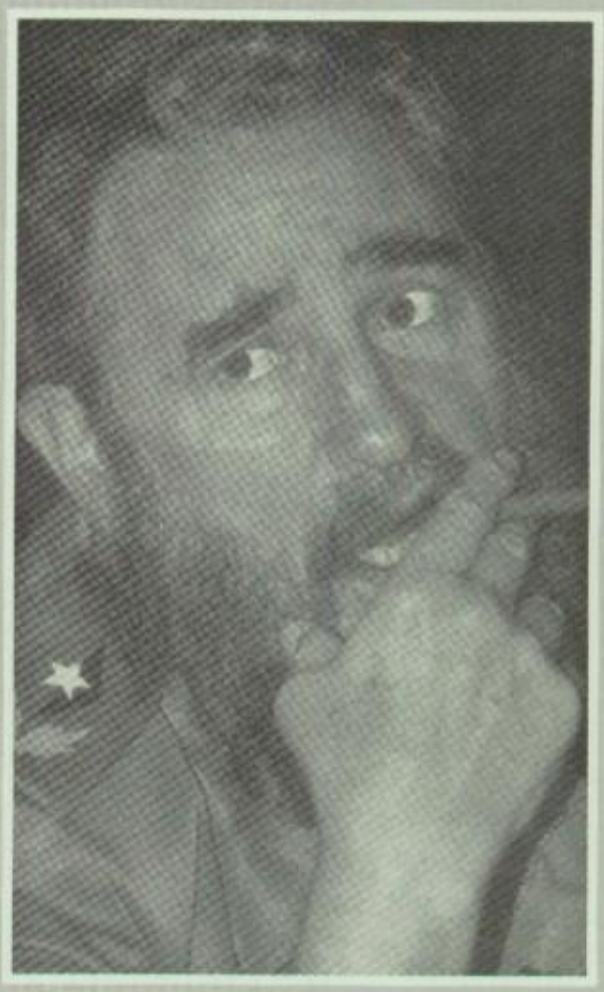
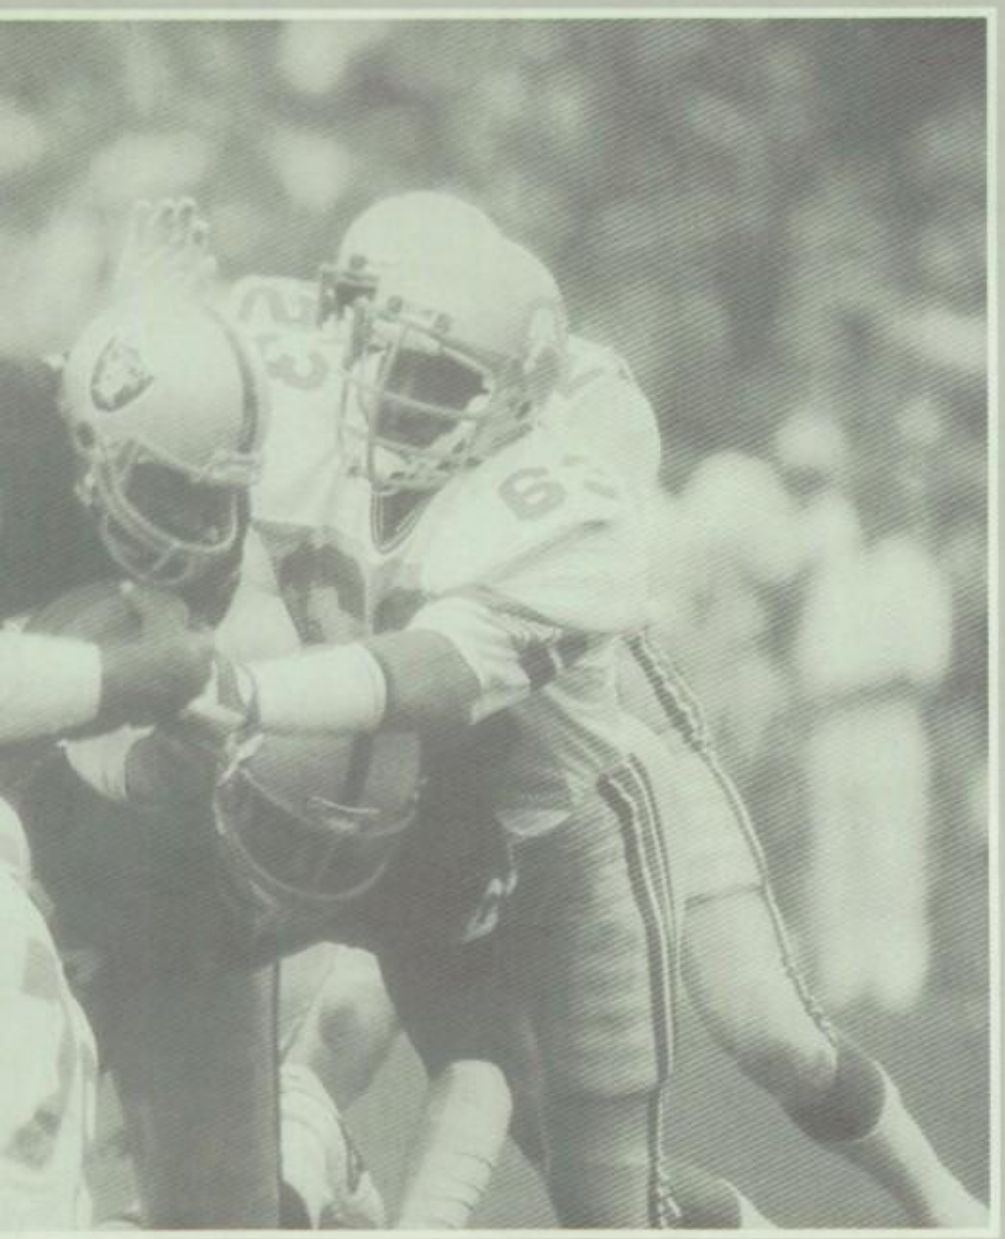
Top-draft pick in 1982, Marcus Allen of the Los Angeles Raiders soars over the Seattle Seahawk defense to earn six points.



After a quarter of a century of revolution, Fidel Castro remains Cuba's invincible leader.



The Year In Retrospect

As expected, Michael Jackson dominated the world of music with continuous hit singles on the pop and soul charts. In 1983-84 he remained at the top with the smash hit album "Thriller", which sold over twenty million copies. Jackson was the first pop singer to make a video movie of the album which included the hit single, "Beat It." The excellent quality of Jackson's video's increased his popularity and enhanced the sound of his music. Along with Jackson, the music industry received tremendous acclaim through the British singer, Boy George, whose songs "Karma Chamelion," "Ill Tumble for You," and "Church of the Poison Mind" all hit the top ten on the music chart.

As popular as Sally Ride, Michael Jackson and Boy George, were in 83-84, the Presidential candidates were the most important event, which attracted a great majority of Americans. The Democratic forerunners, Walter Mondale, Jesse Jackson, John Glenn, and Alan Cranston, all battled for the nomination, while Republican President Ronald Reagan announced his plans for reelection. These candidates all possess valuable characteristics for the welfare of the United States, as well as possessing a promising outlook for the future.

A looks into world politics-The Marines in Lebanon joined in the political game by trying to be both a player and a referee in Beirut and Lebanon. The Marines tried to maintain peace and at the same time influence governmental power, attempting to prevent the Mideast from being incorporated into the Soviet bloc. But the shells continued to fall on the Marines stationed in Beirut. Ronald Reagan insisted that the American peace-keepers were still not involved in any "hostilities," and worked to keep Congress from invoking the War Powers Act. As U.S. positions came under heavy attack, Reagan authorized the Marines to return fire in self-defense. To back them up, American warships pounded insurgent artillery positions, Reagan was quoted as saying that he would do "whatever is necessary to protect our men."

The 1983-84 calender years were years where our country and our lives prospered through trying experiences such as the accomplishments by Payzant for educational reform and the frightening involvement of the United States in Grenada and Lebanon. As people changed for the better, our nation made a transition into improving negative aspects. Drastic steps were taken towards unemployment, inflation and disease, resulting in a positive outlook for the future. It is through experience that we learn to make fewer mistakes. Looking back at the events of 1983-84 we find the courage and motivation to overcome obstacles, to accept challenges with a positive attitude, to increase our unlimited knowledge and ultimately, to search for courage to face the unknown.

Athletics

Athletics (sports) are a grand pastime in this world. Whether organized or individual, they are practiced by nearly all people. With the recent health and fitness craze, athletics have become more than a pastime, they are a frenzied action indicative of human indulgence in fads. Nonetheless, they are good, and raise many participants to euphoria. Besides making you healthier, they can relieve stress, teach discipline, and allow you to relax.

Relax? How can one relax while physically exhausting himself? Well, when life was a greater physical struggle than it is today, we would relax by resting. Today, we exert ourselves more mentally, and relaxation is usually obtained by physical exertion.

In our modern world, athletics have also made a lot of people a great deal of money. With the large market for spectator sports, professional athletes are in demand. For anyone with the necessary talents, working while playing can be ideal. No one, though, receives payment for participating in athletics at Madison. The athletes participate in hopes of becoming professional, to get involved in school activities, or just because they enjoy it.

Athletics have existed since the beginning of recorded history, and they will continue to be a major part of human society. They will be played fervently and in a frenzy, they will be played for money, for personal glory, for the joy of being tired, for the reduction of mental stress, and for the enjoyment of Madison's students.

FOOTBALL

Oh What A Feeling!

With only 34 seconds left in the game, Lincoln scored to tie the game. What an exciting game that was! The crowd screamed for their Warhawks to get another touch down, but with only 20 seconds left Madison just couldn't quite pull it off. After a couple of games it was discovered that Lincoln had more than one ineligible player on the team, which meant they had to forfeit the game and Madison got the win. Overall, Madison had a good season, pulling out a 6 and 3 record. Both quarterbacks and other juniors will be returning next year, along with a couple of good sophomores. One of our four sophomores, Jimmy Dean, played very well in a few games, but was injured and was out the rest of the season. The Warhawks almost beat Morse, but with 25 seconds left in the game, Morse scored and beat Madison 19 to 14. It was a good season and the team worked hard to provide Madison with some exciting football.

Keep The Feeling

Once again the Junior Varsity Football team showed their potential and agility all through the 1983-84 season. This year's team is just the starting point of producing a new generation of players through practice and hard work.

With their mighty offense and defense, under the coaching of Bob Roeder, they had victory on their side. Several outstanding players led the Junior Varsity Warhawks. Some of them were: Marcus Davis, Calvin Harris, Ricky Richardson and Leonard Williams, who as stated by coach Barry "can play almost any position."

The offense moved the ball well even though they ran it most of the time, and chose to throw only when they had to.

> "can play almost any position."

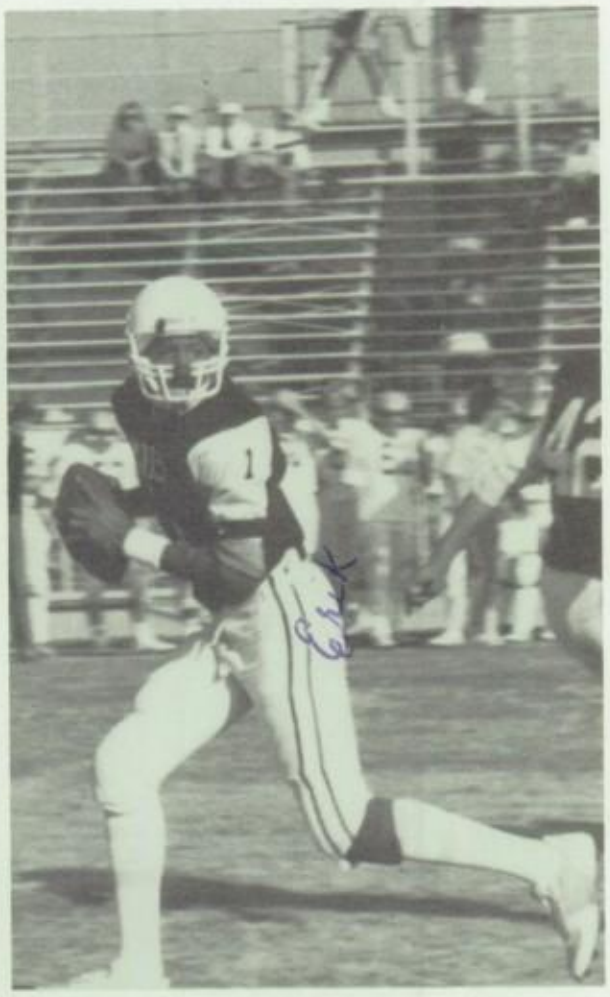
The defense provided good back up for their quarterback. They did have a few problems, but supported each other to try and hold down the points scored against them.

As the season ended with winning five out of the nine league games played, they learned many things as a young team. Such as the satisfaction of a win, a good pass or a great defensive play. And with many promising athletes of today, tomorrow's team has the making of another winner.



The offensive line takes their stance against the Kearny defense.

Keying in on one of his receivers, Eric Jackson drops back to complete a successful pass to his running back.

CROSS COUNTRY

A Runners Day

A runner gets up in the morning and eats a decent breakfast. As he goes to school, he wears his running shoes, and pullover jacket that says in big blue letters, "Cross Country Team". Now everyone knows what sport he is in and people say, "Good luck at your race or game."

The runner gets a little upset, and says to himself, "Boy, I can tell they didn't go to the meets. He then says, in a polite manner, "Races are held at a track field, and football, softball, and baseball are considered games. Cross Country is called a meet." They reply, "Same difference."

The runner hurries to class. People are asking, "Who do you run against?" The runner gives the name of the school. He is in class discussing his time and who he wants to beat at the meet. People pretend they listen, but it goes in one ear and right out the other. Lunch comes and a runner must watch what he eats. Different runners consider the same things, a lot of liquids, a good sandwich, maybe a salad, and staying out of the sun!

"We should make it to City finals. Our top five runners will then go on to C.I.F. prelims. Over all were enjoying running!"

The time has come where all runners suit up in their uniforms and meet outside to exchange gifts from their secret pals. As everyone enjoys their gifts, it's time to leave and head towards Morley Field. There, they stretch out, take warm up laps, check the course out, and check out the opposing team.

The team captain Mark Wilson gets the guys together and says a little prayer and then a cheer to get them hyped up. The members are set on the line ready to go. Getting their shoes right on the white chalk for an advantage of the lead, Barry Tucker and Armando Ramirez shouted "We should make it to City finals. Our top five runners will then go on to C.I.F. prelims. Over all we're enjoying running!"

The Madison Cross Country Team was one of the smallest teams for their division, carrying only ten members. They hung in there tough, and had a lot of positive thinking. They made City finals and some made C.I.F. prelims. They did well for such a small team. There were at least twenty schools in their division.

CROSS COUNTRY

Who Runs At Morley Field?

Do you have the endurance to run five miles everyday and can you handle speedwork around the track for two hours straight? Well, if you can not, maybe you should have spent sometime relaxing at Morley Field and let the girl's Cross Country Team be out of breath for you.

The meets were held on Wednesdays and started about 3 o'clock at Morley Field. Marcella Morris and Kim Viste were returnees and also picked by coach Hannon to be team captains. Marcella and Kim make assignments of where the girls are to run for the day. When speedwork comes around on Monday and Thursday they do 880's, 220's, and 100's with the guys.

"Even though we are new we have got the endurance and willingness to run and catch up with the lead runner, Kim Viste."

Kristy Finley, a sophomore, said, "There were six sophomores, one junior, and two seniors who were running." Diane Hancock also a sophomore said, "Even though we are new we have got the endurance and willingness to run and catch up with the lead runner, Kim Viste."

Coach Hannon has been with the team only two years now, and is developing new workouts for the runners. The girls feel he is doing a great job. He works with them at speedwork and he also pushes them at the meets. He tells them "Let it all out and feel good."

At the starting line, the girls wait for a command, then a whistle, and then a gun to start the race.

Diane Hancock takes a breather after completing her first 2.3 mile run.

TENNIS

It All Paid Off

Girls tennis is another one of Madison's sports that goes unrecognized. Many students don't know we even have a team and don't realize the many improvements made on the team. This year we had a very competitive team. In the words of Joy Miyamoto, the number one and two singles player, "Compared to last year, we gave many of the better schools more competitive matches."

One reason for this major improvement was that Anne Rosser, the girls tennis team coach, worked extremely hard on improving the team's tennis skills. Compared to last year the team had a more serious attitude towards the game of tennis. They were on the courts practicing for several hours every day. Also several players from the boys tennis team worked with some of the players on the girls team, which may have helped the girls improve also.

Kristi Konorchick stated that, "The team was like one big family and the returning players were really nice." Also, this year, there was a closer relationship between the girls tennis team and the boys tennis team. They were secret pals with each other which had not been done the year before. Also the girls team kidnapped the boys team and brought them to the Madison campus. Many of the guys supported the girls on all of their home matches and some of their away games. These were just a few of the activities showing the closeness between the two teams.

"Compared to last year, we gave many of the better schools more competitive matches."

"We worked harder and we worked longer but it all paid off." This statement by Arlene Hagio was apparently true. Compared to a last year's record of 4 wins and 13 losses, this year's team had a 8-9 record with a 3-2 league record which almost boosted them into CIF play-offs. Their loss to Patrick Henry kept them from going to CIF. Coach Anne Rosser believed this may have been one of the best teams in the last couple years here at Madison. So the more serious attitude, hard work, and the spirit of the game all contributed to this year's well improved girls tennis team.

Her speed and consistent ground strokes contribute to Rachel Lau's almost perfect win-loss record and makes her a good doubles player.

Ranked number one and two in singles, Joy Miyamoto's powerful serve makes her into a very competitive opponent. Her excellent game play won her an award as most valuable player.

Concentration must be the key to Cheri McMeekin's consistent serve.

Determination prompted Rebbecca Lau to work extremely hard on her ground strokes. She pounds a backhand winner down the line; the hard work pays off.

GOLF

At Home On The Range

If you're ever in the vicinity of the Tecolote Canyon Golf Course, you'll be sure to see at least one of those guys in the blue shirts either tearing up the course or hitting the range . . . ," remarked one of the senior pro-ams of the Tecolote Golf Course who you would most likely find sitting in the club house, sipping a cool martini, while swapping golf stories.

The "guys in the blue shirts" of whom he was referring are none other than the players on our own golf team. There were a few new players this season who have done surprisingly well. One such player is Tom Woliver, who is "serious" about his game, but not that concerned. "I know my weaknesses," he says, "even though a lot of times I've done nothing about them." Tom, who has been playing seriously for the plast two years, is hoping for a few scholarships as a result of his playing ability.

"The whole team is a credit to the school."

"The whole team is a credit to the school," remarked our principal, Mr. Raleigh. The work of team captain Bruce Adams, and coach Fred (downtown) Brown, should not go unmentioned. "It's been a great season for us all," said Brown, "we've all had a lot of fun."

"Lucky to live in America's finest city," is the response most people give who have ever played on the Torrey Pines Golf Course. The group, who play nearly every game there, seems to agree.

Keep you're head down, widen you're stance, swing easy and follow through . . . "Too darned much to remember," says Matt Cowman.

Team captain Bruce Adams, takes a nice easy swing in a concerted effort to land his ball on the green.

BASKETBALL

"Lords of the Rim"

It takes strength and physical ability to play the game of basketball, and Madison's Lords of the Rim know how to play it well. Early in the season they were rated third in the county, and they set their sights on the Eastern League Championship. They won both the Kiwanis and Baron Optimist tournament. "The reason we are so good is because most of us have played together since junior high school," said Derrick Johnson, team captain.

Being successful is what it's all about and the Lords of the Rim showed how to be very successful. "Fan support and school participation is a very important part of being successful," said Derrick, "If anyone came to one of our practices this year, they probably would not think we are as good as we really are because, we argue like brothers, and that is what we really are."

> "The reason we are so good is because most of us have played together since junior high school."

This year's team showed what basketball was all about. Most of the team graduated this year. But they will always be known as one of the most successful teams Madison has ever had.

Jr. Hoopsters

The Junior Varsity Basketball Team had a fascinating season. They started with a hot streak as they jumped, hopped and sprang their way through tough practices. The team developed great spirit through their practices, and before each game, the coach would say, "Play hard, get fired up and concentrate." As a consequence, they played well as a team with every movement precise, quick and excellent.

After each game, the team would gather together and give a great cheer, and a pat on the shoulders to show good sportsmanship, no matter if the team won or lost. During the "Play hard, get fired up, and concentrate."

Christmas tournament in El Cajon, the team came in second. This put them in third place in the league. The team's toughest competition was Morse and Kearney, and most of all, Mira Mesa. These schools gave Madison some of the best defensive play they faced all season. One of the best players on the Junior Varsity Team was Jimmy Dean. Jimmy Dean put forth some of the best basketball plays the Warhawks ever had, and he was moved to the Varsity team, after the Junior Varsity's third game. The Warhawk Junior Varsity Team did very well this year and Madison students were very proud of them for being one of the best.

BASKETBALL

"Hoops And Hustle"

Thinking, moving quicker than your opponent, and team strategy are just part of playing this enjoyable sport; basketball. It is not only sweating and improving skills. The team needs someone there to push them, to make them want to learn more about the sport each day. This is where Coach Seaman contributes her efforts to the Girls Varsity Basketball Team. "She's a very competitive coach and always out to win. She's a good coach when it comes to basketball," said Tina Miller. "If we don't talk to each other, we seem to lose concentration on the game, but when we communicate we play as a team," said Sharon Dean.

This young team of girls had two returning players, Tina Miller and Jamie Welsh. Added to this hardworking team was a sophomore, Lisa Glassford. She did well for her first year and kept improving her skills for her satisfaction. "I was excited when I first made Varsity, being a sophomore and all. When I played my first game I was nervous and scared, but I proved to the fans that I could play as well as any Varsity player," Lisa said.

The team worked hard every day during sixth period until Coach Seaman was satisfied with their skills, defensive and offensive plays, and running abilities. Pam Smith said, "When our team loses, we know why and what to work on in practice. But when our team wins, we win because we work as a team, and give our best." "Hoops and Hustle" is the name of the game!

Togetherness Is The Key

"We have the potential to become a good team because we all try hard and try to work together when we're on the court," said Bridgette Parker with confidence.

Working out two to three hours each day, the Junior Varsity practiced free throws, passing the basketball in order to set up and shoot the ball from a good distance from the hoop, running up the court to make a swoosh but most important communicating on the court. "Communication on the court during a game is very important in order to help each other get into certain positions on the court so that we can shoot a clean basket," commented Tuesha Weathers. "Without communicating to each other, the team kind of falls apart and we are no longer playing as a team. And a good team doesn't work like that. Everybody has to work together."

Playing girls basketball was not as easy as it appeared when watching from the stands. The girls sweated and the concentration when making a basket was immense. When a basket was attempted but bounced off the side of the rim, an expression of disappointment was expressed on our player's faces. But the determination to get the ball back to try again was always there.

Each girl, trying hard to play defense, realized that they had the potential to steal the ball back, block a pass, or stop a drive towards a basket — and that's exactly what our Junior Varsity had done as the season progressed. "I think our defense was the strongest factor contributing to how well we played. When we put the pressure on, the other team was not able to shoot as well," stated Bridgette Parker. "They ended up missing, giving us the opportunity to take the lead and win the game."

Although our Junior Varsity did not win all their games, they showed that they had the determination to play their best, to try their hardest, and learned that the key to a good team was playing as a team — playing together.

"What do you think you're trying to do?!" exclaims Tuesha Weathers. "When the basketball is in my possession, this ball becomes Warhawk property!!"

BASEBALL

"Live As Hell"

Live" was the only word to describe Madison's Varsity Baseball Team this year. They combined accuracy, smart base running, and ability and came up with a number one team. They were aggressive, young and ready for anything and everything that got in their way. Nothing could stop the Hawks. They demolished the opposing teams one after the other. "The success of our team depends on how we play as one unit," said Jim Nellis, the hawks third baseman. They had problems early in the season but they bounced back. They found that one person could not carry the team to a victory, it had to be a whole team. "It takes 16 people to win the game," said Troy Dill, the hawks catcher. Their hitting wasn't as good as last year's, but their pitching was excellent. "No one can throw heat like our pitchers," said one student. We definetly had outstanding pitchers this year. "Our pitching is our strongest point, but our hitting compliments our pitching," said Jim Nellis. Coach Roeder worked them hard. He kept them in line and got them motivated for every game. With the experience of Coach Roeder, and repeated hard practices, the team relied on each other and that brought an achievement of team unity. Troy Dills final comment was, "We are live as hell."

"It takes 16 people to win the game"

BASEBALL

Confidence Makes Winners

"We play really good ball when we're out on the field; whether it's just practice or at the games. Or I should say we play very good at practice and great at our games," stated Jeff Arcediano.

Our Junior Varsity baseball team was indeed a team showing future potential—the potential to be as exceptional as our Varsity Baseball Team. The team practiced long hard hours on pitching, hitting, base running, but most important trying to work together in order to strengthen any team weaknesses or perfect the stronger qualities of the team. But there was hardly ever a time where each of the player's was without any confidence in one another and their potential to be winners. "We lost a few games, some of them we probably shouldn't have lost and it really hurts to lose. But when you do lose, it's a moral booster; you work even harder at practice and it pays off the next game," confidently smiled Warhawk pitcher Mike Williams.

"When we play together we're the BEST team around"

Although baseball season passed by faster than Madison fans expected, the Junior Varsity Baseball Team added a lot to the excitement of the year. They played as winners, won like champions, and lost with the Warhawk determination to win the next time. "We've learned a lot about teamwork and this season was a good experience for all of us. But the best is yet to come—next year we'll be even better; we'll be an AWESOME Varsity team!" proudly stated Alan Barsoom.

"If this pitcher hits me one more time, I'm really going to . . . oh no . . . here it comes!" whispers John Reynold to himself as he realizes it's walk number two.

"Those 'bleep' seagulls! This has been the third time I've replaced my hat!" an angry David Barton screams as he warns the birds for the last time.

SOFTBALL

The Competitive Edge

With two hours of hard practice everyday after school, there can be no doubt that the Junior Varsity Softball Team was bound to do a good job this year. The team practiced at Olive Grove Park, working on batting and fielding.

In preparation for a game, the coach, Ms. Newhouse, had the team run a half mile and throw a few long throws for the outfielders and short throws for the infielders. The team also studied what kind of offense and defense, and the hand signals they were using.

"Our ultimate goal is to prepare them for the Varsity Squad."

The team was formed of thirteen players. The pitchers were Sherri Rael and Jennifer Castner, and the catchers were Lisa Hickey and Chris Dukelow. Each member played their best showing their good eye and hand coordination.

Determination, indurance, and a competitive edge were all a part of the team. Determined to do well, they used strategy on their offense as well as their defense. Working as a team also helped.

They had a good team hitting percentage, and some players could even play more than one position, but as Ms. Newhouse stated, "The girls are not here to make Junior Varsity a career. Our ultimate goal is to prepare them for the Varsity Squad."

Chris Dukelow swings at Hilltops fast ball for a second strike.

WRESTLING

"Mat Huggers"

The word wrestling, to many of us, just means another sport, but to those who were on the Varsity Wrestling Team this year, it meant winning. We have had a wrestling team at Madison for the past fifteen years. Although the wrestlers are on a team, when they are in competition, it is a two man battle. Our team this year was one of the most promising, and all of the boy's were very sure of themselves. Mr. Ivan Olsen, better known to us as Uncle Ivan, was the coach for the Varsity Wrestling Team. Uncle Ivan has coached wrestling at Madison for the past five years. He has also helped Mr. Gregg Dickson coach the Junior Varsity Team. Uncle Ivan stated that the team this year was "Very dedicated and all of the boy's are winner's, both Varsity as well as Junior Varsity." It takes a lot of hard work to be a good wrestler, and for the wrestling team of 1984, the hard work was definitely worth it.

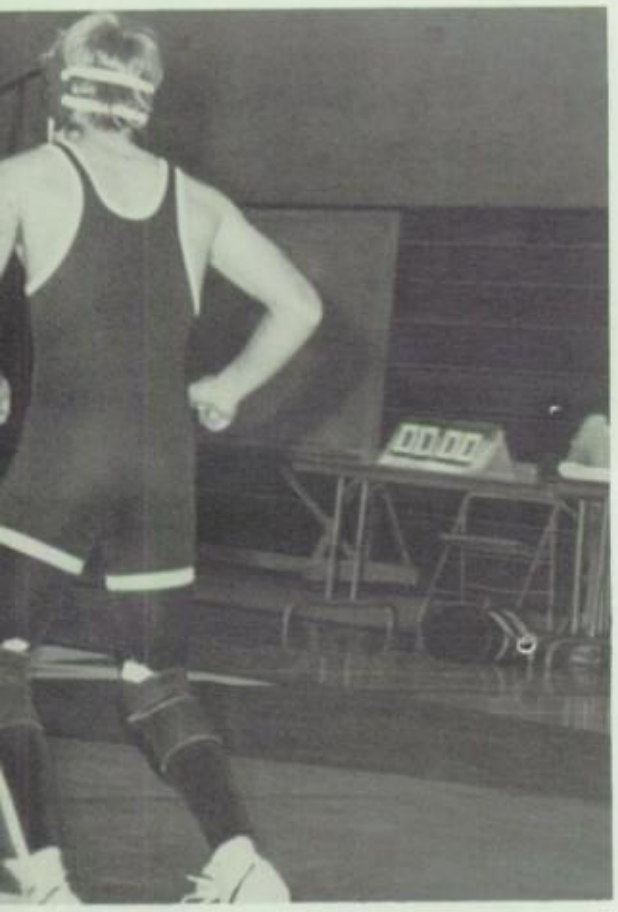
WRESTLING



"Muscle Men"

Out of all the sports offered here at Madison, which one would you consider to be the toughest? The only sport where each individual competed against an opponent his own size is wrestling; A sport that takes mental ability as well as physical attributes. "Wrestling seems to give a sense of power; and an understanding of placement with my fellow teammates", states Dan Brooker, first year wrestler, Before a match, the wrestlers must make weight; concentrate, and as Dan Brooker put it, "kick butt!"

One big help this year for the Junior Varsity was Tom Wirges, a twelfth grader in his first year. He seemed to keep his fellow teammates on their toes. Dana Hopper states, "The best thing about wrestling is when you win, you've done it on your own. SOCCER

Working For Their Goals

The Warhawk soccer team enjoyed a triumphant season with a truly outstanding record. "Just watch us now," said the team with a wry smile on their faces. "Soccer is just as competitive as any other sport, the only difference is that nearly every one on the team gets to play at the same time, where in baseball only one person at a time gets up to bat." stated number 15, John Kinkead. Among the many talents required in the game of soccer, coordinated foot work plays a very important role in shaping the outcome of this fast moving game, which like indoor soccer somewhat resembles hockey.

With all of the attention that the San Diego Sockers have been receiving from their success with indoor soccer, Todd Gross, resident soccer expert, was asked if their would be a chance for indoor soccer to come to high schools. "As much as people would like to see it, the answer would have to be no. The obvious reason would be that the City Schools simply don't have enough money to pay for all of the equipment. This, coupled with the lack of people qualified to referee indoor game, would mean that indoor soccer is out of the question, at least while we are in school," said Gross.

"Indoor soccer is out of the question . . . at least while we're in school"

When, after many months of hard work, the soccer season for high school has finally ended. Many players went on to play in local leagues around the San Diego area where the regular scheduled season usually starts in September and ends in December. The group obviously enjoyed themselves and got an awful lot out of the game. One graduating member sincerly said, "Before I leave this school, I would like to publicly thank our coach, Amir Amirian, who taught us so much. Madison and our team wouldn't have been anything without his help." It is quite certain that the whole team shared his sentiment.

SOCCER

The Baby Has Grown Up.

Endurance, skill, aggressiveness, intelligence, and most of all, determination are some of the qualities a good soccer team must have. This team had them all, and they were determined to give 110% every game. No, This isn't describing Boy's Soccer, but the Girls Varsity Soccer Team.

Girls soccer wasn't here at Madison last year, and people didn't know if girls soccer would get a good turn-out this year, but some thirty girls tried out for the team. Only eighteen girls survived the cuts and made the team. An infant team had been born. A lot of the players had some experience playing on a team before; but only about half the team had played on a team more than one year. They still practiced two hours a day trying to improve their playing skills and endurance.

It was a first year team with a first year coach; Don Omstead. In the words of Kris Van Patten, "We started as a young team with high hopes and expectations and finished the season with an experienced team with great potential for the years to come." Their 4-5-1 season record can be very deceiving. The team got off to a slow start because of lack of match experience, due to not playing any pre-season or non-league games. They finished the season playing very strong and became more competitive. The skill level of the team continued to improve throughout the season. This young team began to grow into a real team.

"We started as a young team with high hopes and expectations and finished the season with an experienced team with great potential for the years to come."

Though they weren't performing at their full potential this season, they were determined to give their all at every game and that determination was their greatest asset.

Parents and students must have enjoyed the fast paced, exciting games the girls played, because every game had a good turn-out. Parents were shouting encouragement and praise to their daughters, students were cheering for their team to score, and everyone was yelling at the referees whenever they made a bad call. The players felt it really helped to have the crowd behind them giving them support.

The players were satisfied with the way they performed this season. They came in fourth place in their league and they continued to grow throughout the season. The majority of the team were sophomores, so they are looking forward to returning next year. Madison should have a strong veteran core to build upon next year. A baby, a young Varsity Girls Soccer Team, was born this year and now the baby has grown up.

Soccer demands a large amount of intelligence. Susan Werth is preparing to use her head to advance the ball down the field for a score.

The goalie or keeper is one of the most important positions on the field. It takes a person with a fearless disposition, like Wendy Christian, to make a good goalie.

FIELD HOCKEY

Sticking Together

"It's a skilled game that takes a lot of endurance," commented Kris Van Patten, one of the four seniors on this year's field hockey team. It was formed by four seniors, two juniors, and six sophomores, three of whom returned from last year.

This year the field hockey season was changed from winter to fall. This made the number of players decrease because most of the players from last year joined either volleyball or tennis, which is now in the same season as field hockey.

"We kept each other's spirits up and always stuck together."

Everyday, five days a week, the girls would practice for two hours after school. It took a lot of practice because only three of the players had played before. Practicing hard everyday, they helped each other learn.

The team played thirteen games this year and with each passing game they progressed. "We kept each other's spirits up and always stuck together," stated Heide Viste. Miss Bennett, the coach of the team, also kept their spirits up and she was always proud of them.

In a game against Mission Bay, Kris Van Patten is relieved to see that they scored the point. Madison went on to win the game 2-0.

Heide Viste gets ready to receive the ball being passed to her. She went on to score the point.

TRACK

Hawks On The Run

Determination, endurance and dedication is the field of track. Consisting of running events, jumping, discus and pole vaulting events, track and field was one of the most physically demanding sports here at Madison.

Predicting an outstanding year, the Varsity team compered in the toughest Eastern League yet and did well considering their competition. The captain of the team was Kirk Johnson, who along with other leaders helped the less experienced members with their training. A fresh spirit of optimism, with arduous training and practice, produced a very capable and impressive team.

"... good team effort with all contributing."

Although the team may have been "young and inexperienced," they were also "aggressive and never quit," according to most members of the team. And as commented by the captain "... good team effort with all contributing."

Overall the team was better this year than in the past. Each member of the team deserves credit for the exceptional effort they put out this season. For those who seem never to win, in the end all come out winners.

TRACK

Striding Toward Success

The Junior Varsity Track Team had the other teams on the run. Their well trained skill at running had the other teams thinking. The team had more sophomores than they thought they would, but with the returning juniors and seniors, they kept the Madison spirit alive. The team practiced every day by running and jogging around the field, and pushing each other to the limit. They also gave each track meet their best effort to achieve the winning score, until their effort developed into a talent. This talent brought out the inner drive that everyone has when they want to win. The team's talent was developed by Coach Bishop. Coach Bishop kept the team going by building up their confidence. He told them "How well you do depends on yourself. If you win, you win; you lose, you lose.

"How well you do depends on yourself. -If you win, you win, you lose,' you lose.

Everyone has to be playing on ground rules because I want you guys to do well, and make this a good track team."

During each track meet, Madison animated the spectators in every event with the top scores and best running times. Madison ran their meets as if they were professionals. They proved to be superior in field events, and became one of the best teams Madison has ever had. The team did extremely well and developed the talent which will perform well next year.

Pushing Beyond The Limits

Every afternoon the team could be seen running up and down the bleachers, sprinting, and stretching. They were the Girls Track team, dedicated to pushing themselves beyond the limit . . . as usual. Who was the main driving force behind the hard workouts? It was Coach Bennett and Assistant Coach Seaman. "The coaches made us work out very hard, and pushed up to keep our confidence up," said senior Bridgett Parker. Although Coach Bennett had coached track before, this was her first year coaching girls track at Madison. There's no doubt that the team was good, but it was also smaller. The team was smaller as a result of corresponding seasons of Girls Track and Girls Softball this year. Many of the girls that participated in softball, also had participated in track. When both sports occured at the same time, a smaller Girls Track team resulted. The size of the team really didn't matter to Coach Bennett who felt, "Every girl deserves her best shot as an individual."

"Every girl deserves her best shot as an individual."

VOLLEYBALL

Its All A Set Up

"Unexpected", stated Coach Renae Seaman when asked about this year's Girls Varsity Volleyball Team. The team was young and inexperienced. Some of the girls had never played volleyball before. The team did amazingly well. They placed second in their division. The J.V. team did well also. They had some success, and gained experience for the move to the varsity team next year.

Hard work helped the team achieve its success, they practied three days a week, and had games two days a week. This year's volleyball team had a record of 13 wins and 6 loses. If they won the game against Patrick Henry, it would have been the second consecutive year that Madison girls volleyball team advanced to CIF. But, unfortunately, they lost.

"They have a promising future ahead of them"

The girls are very proud of their performance. Even those to whom volleyball was a new experience were very impressive. It is no wonder that all the volleyball players were kept smiling. They were proud of their record, but were also pleased by an exciting activity.

Varsity Volleyball coach Seaman seems pleasantly surprised with the success of her team.

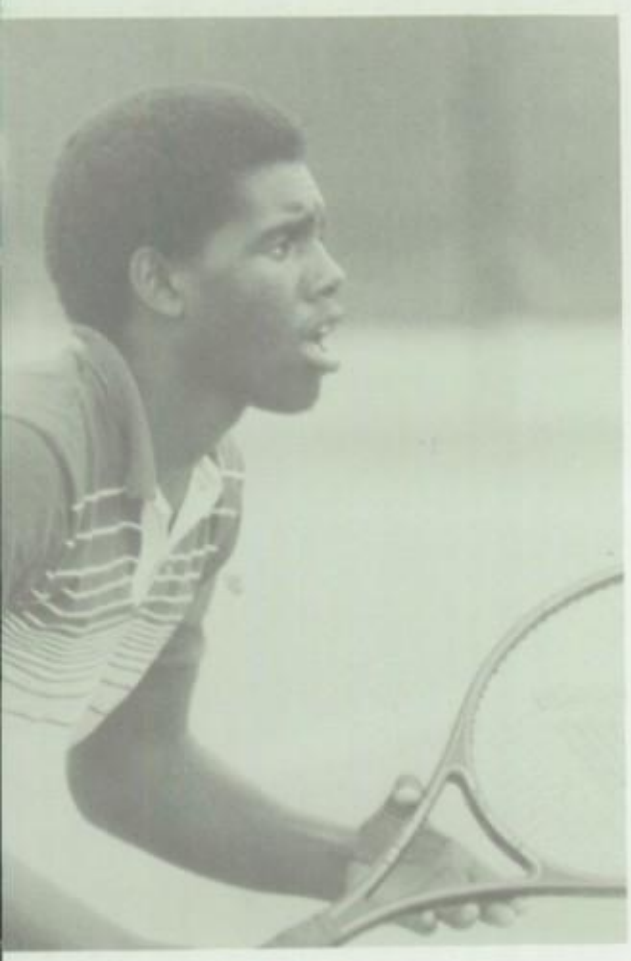
TENNIS



A Smashing Success

Almost everyone has heard of Jimmy Connors, John McEnroe, Yannick Noah, or Jimmy Arias. For those who haven't, they're all great tennis players. At times many of Madison Varsity players shadow the excellence of these great performers. This year's team may have been one of the best teams in the past three years. Most of the team were returning players which gave the team a strong base to build on. This year the coaches in our league decided to change to the C.I.F.-playoff format, which consists of a round robin of the top four singles players and the top two doubles teams. Of the eight players, five were seniors, and all were returning players. The experience of this team was their greatest asset; they knew what they would be getting into. They had felt the pressures of game play; some for three years.

Due to the change from match play to a C.I.F. play-off format, increased importance was placed on the doubles teams, since doubles was worth a possible twelve points and a total of fifteen points was needed for a team victory. Coach Anne Rosser said, "This year's doubles teams may have been the strongest in the past three or four years." Even though there was extreme pressure placed on doubles, they performed in the clutch; usually.

"It was the experience and the team spirit which gave the team its strength."

Doubles wasn't everything. The singles held their own and a lot more. Jerry Williams could always be counted on when the going got rough. Jeff Jones was relatively new to singles play but he pulled his game together and played good tennis throughout the entire season. All the singles player gave their all in every match and played their best during the season.

The success of this years team can't be placed on the singles players or the doubles players but on the whole team. It was a collective effort by every player on the team. Everyone worked together and supported each other; yelling encouragement from the sidelines to their teammates. There were many who came and supported the team at their matches. The support of the fans really helped when the players morale was down. Their presence and support gave some players the extra something to pull through in the really tough matches. Kris Van Patten, along with Cheri Mc Meekin, were the team's two most loyal fans; coming to nearly all the team's matches. "It was the experience and the team spirit which gave the team its strength." Stated Drayl Newsome, a doubles player for Madison's Varsity squad. This statement sums up the key to Madison's success this year; experience, determination, and teamwork were their greatest assets.

Lobs are a very effective tool, and are used often in tennis so one has to have a good overhead. Smashing an overhead from the base line, Mark Ishihara falls a little off balance.

C.I.F.

A Select Few Make CIF

The California Interscholastic Federation or C.I.F. was organized at a high school athletics convention held at the Y.M.C.A. Field House in Los Angeles, on March 28, 1914. Today the schools of the San Diego section of the C.I.F. believe that a broad program of interscholastic athletics has a high potential for contributions to the development of youth which is in harmony with the major objectives of our secondary schools. Among these values are development of scholarship, health, coordination, recreational interests, and physical fitness; habits of clean living, fair play, honesty, respect for rules and authority; development of qualities of cooperation, teamwork, leadership, responsibility, self respect, courtesy for others, perseverance and courage.

Some of Madison's teams and individuals made it into the C.I.F. standings. Mark Wilson, long distance runner, came in twelth. Girls Basketball ended up in the quarter finals. Girls Volleyball turned out second in their league. The wrestlers that made it were; Matt Smitz, who ranked eighth in the final finishes; Jim Ainsworth, eighth in the final finishes; Marland Jorgenson, fourth in the Masters 135 Pounds; Sam Mason, sixth in the Masters 148 Pounds; Danny Braas, third in the Masters Heavyweight; and John Northdurft, third in the Masters 141 Pounds.

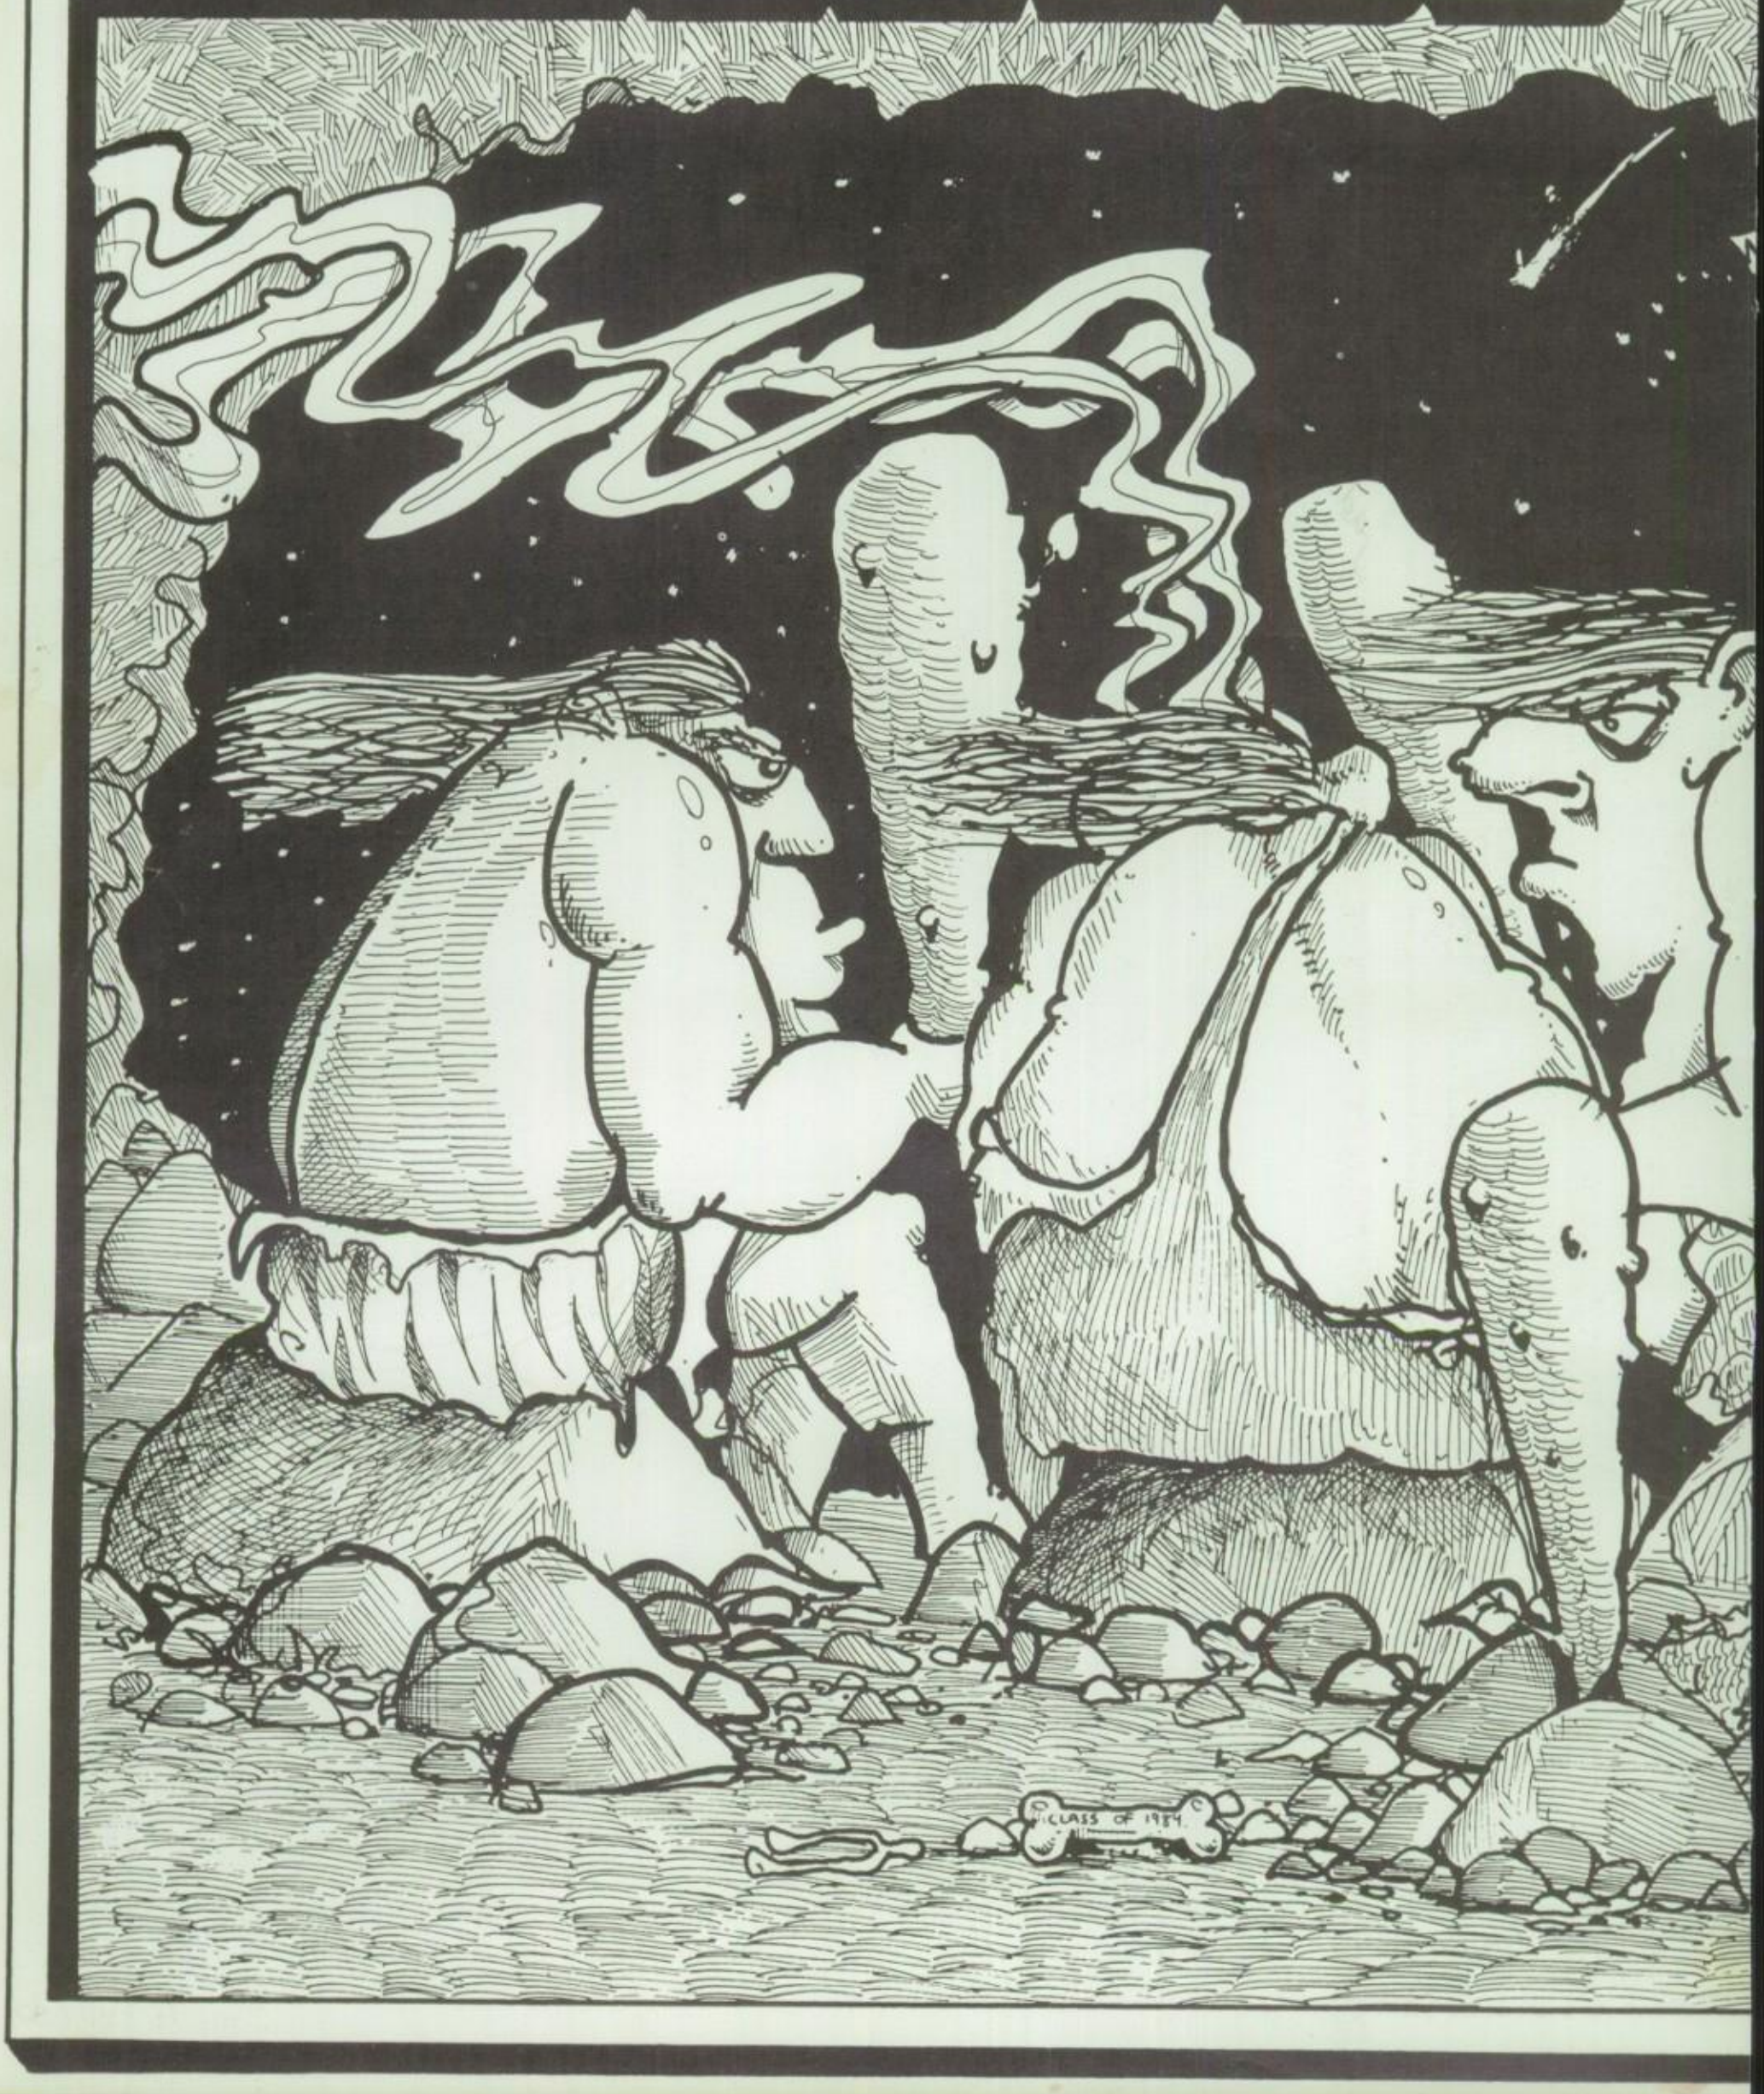
CLUBS



Organizations

What does organization mean to you? A clean locker? Color coordinated notebooks? Do you organize your books in order of classes in your locker? Is this what you call organization? Well, for many other students, organization means ASB, Yearbook, Talon, Cheerleading, Band, or ROTC. These organizations can hardly be compared to color coordinated notebooks.

Looking around Madison, it is obvious that many students appear unorganized. Their only claim to organization is their participation in organizations around Madison. While some of these organizations have been around since electricity, others have just been around since MTV. Whether they are old or new, they all play very important roles at Madison.

They all involve the students in activities around Madison. These organizations give students a chance to work with other students and faculty members. Students learn how to handle responsibilities and organize activities. They also get a chance to be creative in their activities, and there's no doubt that having fun has its place in these organizations too.

ASB Adds More Spirit To Madison

What do the three initials A.S.B. mean to the students here at Madison? Many of the students are not familiar with what the ASB (Associated Student Body) represents. Their main goal is to boost the spirit of each student, and to make sure that every student is enjoying this year here at Madison. The ASB works closely as a group and the members get along well with each other. Pat Rogers agrees, "We are like a big happy family and everyone gets along swell." Of course, as with any other organization or group, there are minor conflicts, but as the activities this year showed, they all worked out smoothly. The responsiblities of the ASB are to conduct sales, lunchtime activities, and dances. The dances seem to be the most important events of the school year. The Homecoming dance and the Senior Prom take the most time and effort to organize and prepare. The other dances took time and effort also. According to Roger Whitney, Puddle Day; which is the day a boy jumped into the puddles made by the rain; was the most important event of the school year, although the faculty didn't seem to think so.

There were twenty-three members on the ASB. The president was Elien DeVera and there are twenty-two other officers. This year the Madison students seemed to be communicating with each other more. Unlike the previous years; now the students can talk and discuss school work and even just plain goof off! Every race has joined together in making the year at Madison better than ever and for much of this we can thank the ASB. 1984 has been a year of changes and the ASB has always been there to make sure that the changes were for the better.

Local Colorists

The definition of local color is that which describes the surrounding environment. Recording special and memorable events of high school days was the goal of the Madison Yearbook Staff. Our classrooms, football games, formal dances and the students themselves all represented the local color of Madison High School. Creating a history book to last a lifetime was our purpose, but this was often easier said than done.

Searching for pictures and struggling to write interesting copy were common frustrations of the 1983-84 Prospectus Staff. With only seven returning members, meeting deadlines meant additional hours of corrections and proofreading for advisor, Mr. Penn and editors Derek Peck and Marcella Quijencio. But nevertheless, the Yearbook Staff succeeded in splashing a wealth of local color onto the pages of the 83-84 Prospectus.

With a smaller staff, the work load became greater. Head photographer Kathryn Binks was kept busy with scheduling photo sessions and organizing the camera department. Not to forget the frequent mishaps such as disappearing pictures two days before a deadline or a scheduled photo session without a photographer. Although things ran smoothly the majority of the time, we didn't always escape chaos.

The 83-84 Staff was comprised of talented and creative people. A wide variety of personalities and various interests were a definite advantage in creating a unique and colorful book. From cheerleaders to tennis players, the doctor's office secretaries; these were the students who slaved fifth period over layout sheets, copy fitting and cropping pictures to produce a history book rich with unforgettable memories.

Talon Tells All There Is To Tell

"This year we had the best editorial staff ever." Duncan Henderson's statement was the feeling of the entire Talon staff. The staff had high hopes for the Madison newspaper.

There were several changes made in this year's Talon and staff. First of all the size of the Talon was doubled; last years four page paper was increased to eight. Also, this year's staff was much larger. Part of the reason for this increase was because much of the staff was recruited from advanced English classes, and not just the Journalism classes. Last year's staff was made up of thirteen members. This year's staff was almost double that. Five of the twenty-five staff members were returnees from last year's staff. Four of them were editors. Eddy Fernandez, editor-in-chief, has the final opinion on all Talon output. His excellent writing ability and his good leadership qualities were valuable assets to his arduous position. Duncan Henderson, another returnee, was newspage editor. His page covered many of the events that had an effect on the Madison campus life. Phil Farmer is an experienced writer. He was written for The Sentinel, and San Diego Tribune, and a magazine entitled CIF Sports. He is the Sports page editor. He wishes to attend school at Sacramento State University and major in Journalism. With his exceptional writing style he is sure to succeed in the field of journalism. Joe Mitch, yet another returnee, added a continuing comic strip entitled "Back to Basics" which was a satirical representation of school policies. "All-in-all we had a good staff this year," stated Duncan Henderson. The expanded length, the added features, the strong writing, and the excellent direction of this year's editorial staff all were factors in the development of an outstanding Talon for 1984.

Extra Special . . . Extra Hot!

"Everytime I would go to a varsity football game and glance at the cheerleaders cheering, I always thought that there was nothing to it. Until I made it on the squad and realized that cheering wasn't all that it appeared to be," affirmed Gloria Salas one of only two juniors on the varsity squad of ten cheerleaders.

Cheerleading probably appeared to be easy because of the two to three and sometimes four hours a day after school that the varsity cheerleaders devoted to perfecting cheers, chants, making up new pyramids, pep rallies, and cheers and dances for cheerleading competitions. "With the many different chants and cheers that we do, you really need a good memory because sometimes you end up doing moves to a chant that are supposed to be done in a different chant," stated Dawn Emert.

When representing Madison at the USA cheerleading camp at Santa Barbara, the varsity squad received a superior trophy and a spirit stick, the highest awards a squad can receive while at camp. "We learned a lot of new cheers and chants but the most important aspect of camp was the fact that we had the chance to get to know each other better, accept one another and work around each others weaknesses," replied Eileen Velasco, co-head cheerleader.

Each Madison cheerleader tried to achieve the goal of motivating the students attending Madison to show their school spirit while at the same time having fun. "We try our best to yell, raise spirit, and get the crowd going to support the sports and activities that take place, even if we're not winning — just because we believe that Madison is number one, win or no win," stated senior cheerleader Keri Scott.

"Come on everybody, flip up those collars because it's time to get COOL," yell Eileen Velasco and Gloria Salas as they show the crowd their cool look.

Strive, Struggle, Succeed!

"I like to run around and be crazy and have a good excuse for doing it!" said Rhonda Provus, one of this year's Junior Varsity Cheerleaders, when asked why she tried out for J.V. Cheerleading. The squad consisted of eight enthusiastic, spirited, hardworking girls, who worked a couple hours a day during the summer to perfect their various cheers and chants. It was a constant struggle from the beginning. Most of the girls had never cheered before, and it wasn't an easy struggle to get where they were this year. "I'm really pleased with their efforts, they have really improved drastically since the beginning of the summer!", commented Michelle Burner, one of the Varsity Cheerleaders. "They are th best J.V. squad I've seen at Madison in a long time.", says Judy Flor, head Varsity Cheerleader. Although the Varsity Cheerleaders were proud of their "Little Sisters" they certainly were not the only ones. The J.V. teams were very proud of them. Their enthusiasm and spirit helped the teams get the encouragement they needed to succeed in all the games that they played.

They've Got It!

Wait a minute . . . there's only one two, three, four . . . 115 students in our marching band this year. What happened?

Compared to the 150 students comprising the largest organization here on campus in the past few years, the decline of enrollment in San Diego City Schools has affected the enrollment of students into Madison and thus a decrease in the number of students participating in our marching band. Nevertheless, the band has presented the Warhawk marching motto "Whatever the band does, it always does it with class," as Keith Flitner, president of the band proudly states.

Although our band may not be as large as Madison's bands from previous years, the music to be played during half time shows at football and basketball games is still chosen by the students of the band. The auxilaries — tall flags, rifles, drill team, and letterettes — make up all their own routines and the many different marching band formations are designed by band director Mr. Hickman.

Traveling all over Southern California representing Madison in a variety of band competitions, the band has earned an undiminishing reputation. They are regarded by band members of other high schools as being "one of the best" bands from San Diego — all due to the fact that each member pursues the same major goal of trying their best to produce the finest quality of music to earn the title of "number one."

Spirited, crazy, and rowdy, their spirit once again has continued, contributing to the Warhawk's pride in Madison High School.

After giving the signal to begin playing, Paul Holtz intensely listens to the band play "The Rose."

Satisfied with having performed a flawless solo at one of the half-time field shows during a football game, Keith Flitner expresses his feeling of joy with a little smile.

The white gloves and the white boots emphasis their percision as the team lines up in Balboa Park.

The Drill Team: What Does It Take?

What does it take to become part of the Drill Team? First the girl has to decide what she wanted to be an officer or a squad member. To be an officer she was required to compose a routine, and a squad of thirty girls was assembled to perform the routine. If she decided to be a squad member she had to learn hand movements, and intricate dancing techniques combined into a well performed routine. When the final team was chosen the girls practiced three to four hours a day, year round, which included competitions. One of their competitions included a trip to San Francisco last summer where they won eight awards.

June Bradbury, the team captain, said "Being on the drill team is very exciting. We got to meet a lot of different people. We want to make our high school years important and fun for us."

Although our drill team was smaller in number than in the years past, they were just as big in spirit.

Wave The School Spirit

Tall Flags represent the school's colors as the team waves them high with spirit and pride. The team prepared for a year full of competitions. The Tall flags praticed from two to four hours a day and really dedicated their time, energy, and power to make their show exciting. They had to concentrate on their routines and moves so that they were precise and their angles would be perfect. They were almost soldiers because of the discipline they had, but to be good they had to listen to orders and follow every command so every movement would be perfect.

Mr. Hickman, band director, proudly watches the band's performance.

The Beat Goes On!

Madison's Jazz Ensemble played at their first festival in Mission Viejo in February of '84, where they competed in the National Jazz Competition. During the first part of the year, the Jazz Ensemble spent most of their time preparing for the competitions by playing at Open House and practicing both in and out of the classroom.

The ensemble was composed mainly of Seniors, with only three Juniors and two Sophomores in the sixteen member group. The experience of the returning Seniors proved to be a definite asset to the group, despite the loss of the experienced players who graduated last year.

The Jazz Ensemble played a wide variety of jazz and contemporary music, in order to appeal to a wider range of listeners, from young to old. The groups format usually consisted of 4-5 pieces but they usually performed approximately 9-12 different songs throughout the year.

According to three year ensemble member, Paul Holtz, "This year's group has both talent and experience which leads to a successful year." Anyone who has heard the Jazz Ensemble play will instantly see the dedication of the students, and the fun they have while performing.

Play It Again Band

With the Pep Band bringing more spirit to this past year, they have provoked enthusiasm at Madison as a whole. The Pep Band was an organization of about thirty students who were advised by Mr. Hickman. The band performed at Basketball games and were just as fun to listen to as the games were to watch. They also took part in school rallies, and other outside affairs in the community.

Because these students were also members of the Marching Band, being in the Pep Band was an "extra" that they participated in. There were no practices after school, so each of them practiced at home and on their own. They played songs from the Marching Band list as well as crowd rousing music when they performed. When asked what was liked best about being in the Pep Band, the most reoccuring answer was "having the crowd join in."

Although there was a dress code for the Pep Band, which was a light blue shirt and blue pants, none of the members seemed to mind. Just as long as they had the opportunity to do what they liked best, and that was playing music.

Bates Bunch

"The group does very well, they have a lot of talent, and they put it to good use!", commented Miss Bates who directs the Honor Ensemble. The group consisted of a number of students, both male and female, who when they put their voices together sound very much like a miniature Tabernacle Choir. This year they performed for several different places, a couple of them were: Target, on their special open day for senior citizens, and KYXY radio to record some Christmas music. They also sang at Madison's open house.

Miss Bates took over the group for the first time this year. Although she has taught English at Madison for sometime this was her first year with the Honor Ensemble. When asked how she liked it she replied, "I have always wanted to teach music and I'm very glad I have had the opportunity to do it!" Miss Bates will be directing the group from now on and seems to be very excited about it.

Every year the Honor Ensemble has taken a trip but due to the bad finances, were unable to make last year's annual trip. This year Hawaii seems closer than ever due to the money they have saved over the year. Miss Bates has a great bunch of singers. Keep up the good work!

A Classical Second Semester

During the second semester, the students of the marching band are divided into two other performing groups; the Concert Band and the Wind Ensemble. Each group consists of approximately thirty to thirty-five people, and rehearses for one hour each day.

In this setting, the two groups concentrate more on classical music, as opposed to the loud, exciting sound of the marching band. The Wind Ensemble is the more advanced of the two groups, consisting of more experienced people and performing more difficult music.

During the spring, both groups spent their time competing in festivals throughout San Diego County, and by putting on concerts for various schools and organizations. The format of each group usually consists of three songs, although they perform five to seven different pieces throughout the spring.

Both the Concert Band and the Wind Ensemble are directed by Mr. Dean Hickman, who believes that the students learn more about music the second semester, because there is no emphasis placed on anything else, such as marching, as there is in the fall. Anyone who has heard either the Concert Band or Wind Ensemble rehearse or perform, will instantly notice the concentration and dedication of both the students and the director.

Preparing The Deaf For Independence

The deaf program started here at Madison about fifteen years ago, and within the last five years it has grown. Candyce Sevick, the chairperson of the program, stated that when she came here, about six years ago, there were only six students, and this year, it has grown to thirty-seven.

The program basically started to help the students academically. It works like this; The counselor, Janet Terry, and the teachers, look at what the student can do and what he wants. Then they decide whether the student should be with an interpreter, in a regular class, or stay in the deaf classes.

There are four teachers who teach the deaf classes. These specially trained teachers teach the basics; English, math, social studies and science.

If the student is not in a deaf class, they try to group a few students together with an interpreter.

This year the program has decided to start a deaf club where they will get together with students from other schools and play games, and get to know each other.

Each student is encouraged to join sports. "We try to have the students be more independent," said Miss Sevick.

The final goal of the program is to help each student academically and socially, but what is most important is to make them as independent and as successful as possible.

People Sharing Common Interests

They met Wednesdays after school. They helped produce plays at Madison. They were set up to support the Drama Department. They got together and saw plays all over San Diego. Their technical name was Madison Theatre Arts Guild, but they were known as the Drama Club. "They're as much of a social club as anything else," said Mr. Hollenbeck. The club was open to anyone who wanted to participate and there were no prerequisites necessary to join, although there was a 50¢ a year membership price. The club also offered workshops on how to try out for plays.

Besides attending many plays together, the Drama Club was the major support of the Drama Department. They produced plays at Madison by raising money selling candy and tickets. They also ushered and helped work backstage. Their job was to ensure the play was successful and professional.

The Drama Club had more input than in past years, in suggesting what plays the Drama Department would do. The actual choice was done by Mr. Hollenbeck. This was because Mr. Hollenbeck was better able to see what type of actors the Drama Department had this year, comedy or dramatic, and he chose a play that used their talents to the best degree. Mr. Hollenbeck didn't have enough students to do a large scale musical this year, so he chose a small scale musical with serious parts and funny parts, called Stop The World - I Want To Get Off. "This year they built a very good Drama Department because they had a very good Drama Club," commented Mr. Hollenbeck.

The president of the Drama Club this year was senior, Theresa Jennings, and vice president was junior, Kim Snyder. The Drama Club also handed out awards to the outstanding actor, actress, and stagecrew. Awards were also given for contribution from a member from each class; sophomore, junior, and senior. These awards were voted on by members of the Drama Club. These members were just people sharing common interests.

Getting The Act Together

It takes a special part of a person to feel pride without getting any credit", according to Dennis Hollenbeck director of the stagecraft class. This is a very special course of 16 selected students of juniors and seniors.

The type of recognition this group generally receives is negative remarks, because it seems that the only time that their work is noticed is when there is a "goof" during a production. They help the actors with their make-up and costumes besides building the sets.

Most people don't stop to think about the work it took to prepare the scenes, and coordinate changing the props between the scenes, sound technology, art, design, drawing the curtains, and handling the proper lighting effects at their appropriate time during the play.

It took long hours of hard work and preparation to make "Dino" and the spring musical, "You're a good man Charlie Brown" such a success.

Mogul Bash

Posters were put up, dates and information were in the bulletins. Any students who didn't see these things really missed out. The ski club had a lot of trips in 1984. They had a one day trip to Mountain High which is in Wrightwood Ca. A total of 39 students went on that trip. The next trip was to Mammoth. They stayed two days with one day of lodging. In February they went to Lake Tahoe. The cost was $175 for two nights lodging, three day lift tickets, and bus transportation by Greyhound. The first day they skied Alpine Meadows. Their condos were right down the street from the resort. They did nine hours of skiing there and would return to their condos about five o'clock. At six o'clock the bus driver, Smitty, would take them into town to shop for food or dine out. Sunday they skied Squaw Valley, which was fifteen minutes away. The wheather was great. Squaw Valley had about twenty chair lifts. Monday was their last day to ski. They skied Northstar, which was about thirty minutes away. Northstar was a little higher up in the mountains which brought cold wind and cloudy skies. The members were glad to ski Northstar last. It was a relaxing mountain and not too crowded with people.

The bus loaded at two thirty and traveled to Stockton for dinner and gas, and then to L.A. to change bus drivers. As they arrived in L.A., there was one problem. There wouldn't be a driver for another hour. Smitty took the crew for a tour around Downtown L.A. Any member will tell a good story about that experience. Before Smitty left, the Madison students tipped him for all his kindness and help. Madison ski club took a two day trip to Brianhead before Easter vacation. The club advisors were Jan Vermillion and Tom Hetherington, who made 1984 a fun and successful ski year. The people who went on the trips gave each other nick names such as: Geek Bird, Ingie, Chunks, Sydney Koala, Olaff, and ¾ who put his boots on the wrong foot, or gotcha on the Kodak disc. Madigraphs

You will not find Madigraphs in the dictionary, but I'm sure that Daniel Webster would have heartedly approved! Most anyone on the Madison campus would tell you that the Madi comes from the American word abbreviation for Madison High School and that the graphs comes from the American word meaning to print. Put the Madi and graphs together in the same word and you get 21 Madison printers.

Madigraphs is a class and club that meets in room 709 and creates and prints things like the PTA Hawktalk, that tells your parents all of the latest scoop, the posters and programs for most of the campus activities, and a good share of the forms that are used to help the school function in its superior manner.

How do you get in the class? Well, actually it is rather simple. You must complete Graphic Arts 1-2 with a "B" or better and show an interest in creativity and good citizenship. Then, you must obtain Mr. Nelsons "OK" on your registration card.

Mr. Nelson has taught the class for over 21 years and says he wishes more people would get involved in the class. He feels as though the class is a real learning experience. Melissa Fieck this years senior superintendent of the class and 3 year veteran says this about the class, "I enjoy seeing the final product of my work, its a real self-rewarding class."

In all, the class printed over 100 things throughout the school year and Madison is very grateful to them.

In his art booth, in the classroom, is Mr. Nelson, looking over some negatives.

JROTC

The main goal of the students on our Junior Reserve Officers Training Corps (JROTC), this year, was to learn citizenship and leadership. Hygiene, first aid and teamwork are integral parts of the program. All of the men as well as women developed organizational know-how; they learned how to think on their feet; they learned to get ideas across and be self-reliant.

Some of the more exciting experiences the caders shared included drill teams, color guards, honor guards, and Varsity and Junior Varsity teams. This year both male and female color guards won the competition with other schools. Out of a possible five hundred points the men scored four hundred and ninety-nine, and the women scored four hundred and ninety-eight.

Chris Hubbard stated "In order to like anything, you must understand it." In order to understand it, consider its history. During the Civil War, the congress of the U.S. saw the need for military training in college and passed the Morril Act in 1862. This act gave land and money to colleges if they would offer military training at their schools. The ROTC program progressed after World War I. The program started the 1919-20 school year with about 90,000 students. The rapid growth of the Army during World War II would not have been possible without ROTC.

The junior Reserve Office Training Corps, which we have at our school, and remained unchanged since 1916 until the passage of the ROTC Vitalization Act by congress in 1964. Enrollment in Army ROTC in 1980 was 109,170 caders of which 72,701 were male and 36,469 female. In 1973, Congress changed the law to allow females to be enrolled as caders. As of June 1980, ROTC units are located in forty-one states, West Germany, the Panama Canal Zone, Virgin Islands, Puerto Rico, Guam, and Samoa. It is planned to have ROTC units in all fifty states in the near future.

They've Got 'Ambassador Class'

The United Nations is one of the most effective organizations ever developed to keep the world at peace. Madison, and five other schools throughout the district took part in a unique program known as the model U.N. or U.N. club as it is often called. The schools were each assinged different countries depending on the number of people in the club. Five to six people made up an entire committee for a particular country. The committee then researched their country in the area each person was assigned.

The following months, conferences were held at San Diego State University, University of San Diego, and various hotels, many as far away as Los Angeles. High school age representatives from all over Southern California took part in these conferences which were run exactly as the United Nations assembly in New York.

Madisons club had twelve members including the President, Mary Anne Thompson, Vice President, Pat Rogers, and treasurer, Frank Thompson. Adviser Larry Sutton witnessed an extremely successful club govern their countries, El Salador and the Phillipines.

Understanding Other Cultures

AFS began as the American Field Service in 1914, a volunteer ambulance corps with French armies. Its mission today is quite different. The AFS gives students the opportunity to travel to various countries and learn about different cultures. Over 3,400 U.S. students go abroad through the efforts of AFS, and a similar number of students from other countries visit the U.S.

At Madison High School there were two students who the AFS sponsored from other countries: Helena Nordman and Stergios Barboutis. They both enjoyed their stay here.

Susan Bares was the Madison AFS Club Advisor. The members of the club spent the year trying to raise enough money to help students who could not afford the total cost of the program.

AFS was not all work for its members. It was also a learning experience. The year's events included movies of the home countries by exchange students. It is an opportunity for all the members to learn about other cultures and political systems.

Susan Bares, AFS advisor thinks the club members made a great team.

A Fair?

On May 9, 1984 Madison started a new tradition, a Multi-cultural Fair. Students from Hale Junior High were familiar with the scene but the cultural dances, food booths and booth representing different cultures and countries, found it to be a pleasant surprise.

The fair was organized by the Race Human Relations Committee to comply with the goal set up by the school district. The Race Human Relations Committee thought a fair would be a fun way for students to learn about their own ethnic backgrounds as well as the ethnic backgrounds of others.

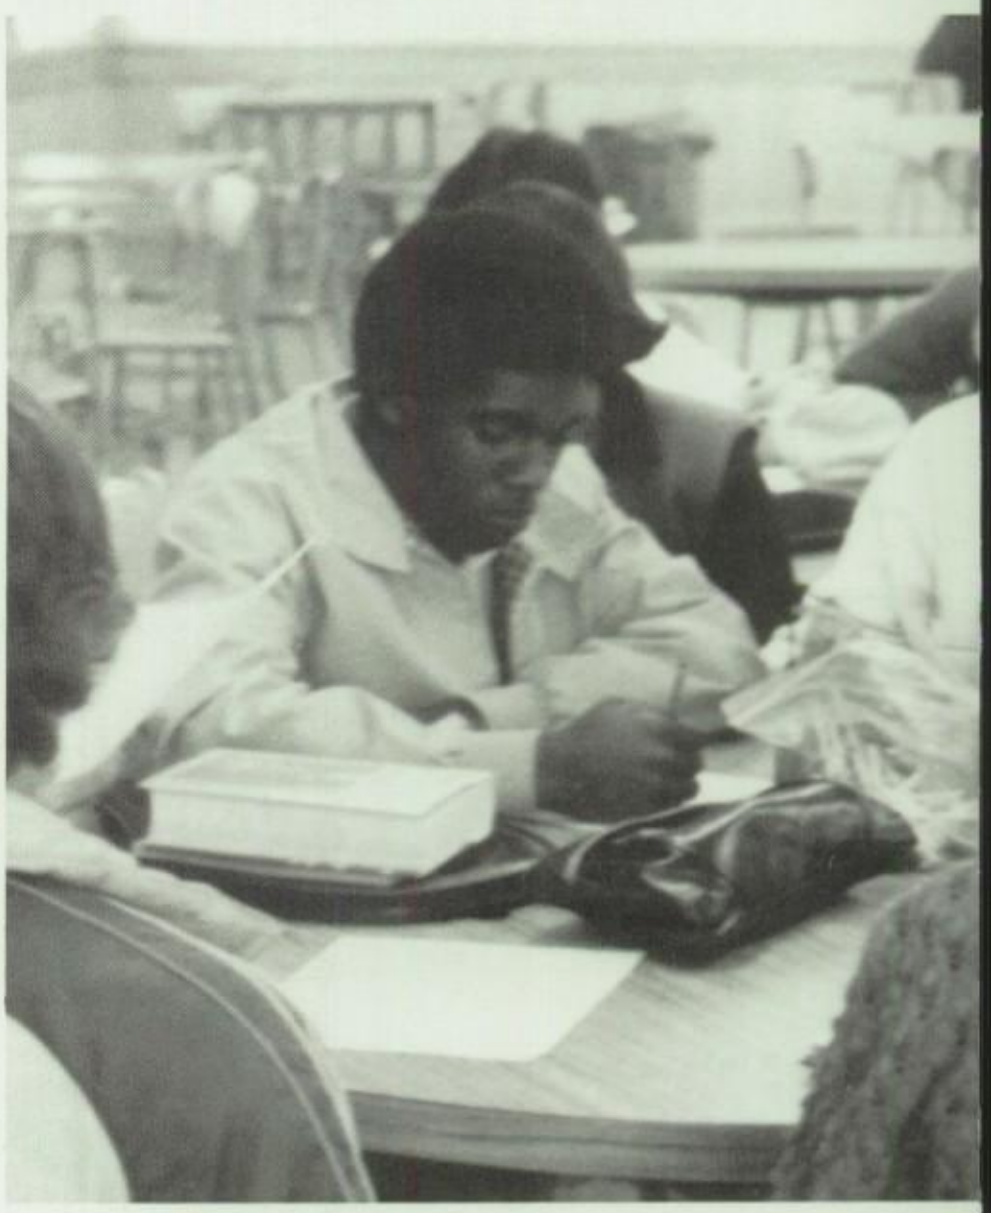
Another first for 1984 was that there was no Race Human Relations Dance at the end of the school year, although most students agreed that the fair was a very good substitute. The brains behind those ideas was head of Race Human Relations, Bethyl Mitchell, along with Farris Flagg, chairperson of the fair. Sponsor, Ms. Miller and our new Vice-Principal, Mr. Swain were very helpful in the outcome of a successful Multicultural Fair.

Race Human Relations wasn't all fun and games, there was a serious side to it too. There was another set of guide lines created by the district. The committee, that met every other month of the school year, had to solve any concerns or problems on the Madison campus.

After the success of the Peer Counselors of the previous year, Bethyl along with chairperson, Rick Middlebrook, set up a similar program. The program involves some tutoring along with help for students who had problems with truants. Most of these students just needed someone that would listen to their problem, so they could get things straight.

The 1984 Race Human Relations Committee was very effective in helping others whether it was helping to understand others or just helping someone who needs someone to talk to. This committee will be looked at as a model for future committees.

Communication is the key to Race Human Relations being successful. Here Ms. Miller and Bethyl Mitchel discuss plans for the fair.



Everyone in school has a chance to put in their two cents worth. At one meeting Daryl Newsome writes down his suggestions for the school year.

The shinning black sphere curves down the lane, hurling towards its target at sub-light speeds, very sub-light speeds. It explodes into the pocket shattering the formation of pins; scattering them across the lane for a strike.

Bowling can be a very enjoyable sport once you get involved in it and that's just what some of our Madison students did. John Kloska and William Powell; two teachers at Madison, were the two directors of the Bowling Club. The Bowling Club practices at the Kearny Mesa Bowl every Monday.

The Bowling Club members play on an inter-club league consisting of eight teams. Each team has three person on it and each team plays a total of three games at a time. Near the end of the year, in May, the tournament winners were chosen. There was a banquet at the end of the year where awards were presented to distinguished players; awards such as the male and female with highest game or highest series.

The members of the club were just trying to have a little fun doing something they enjoyed; though they were trying to improve their bowling skills in the process. All of the members were good friends and liked to kid around and have fun but they still wanted to win. When the matches started the attitude switched from playful to serious; a real competitive atmosphere arose. Everyone had the competitive spirit in the club.

Not everyone thinks bowling is a fun and exciting sport but the approximately 24 members, men and women, of the club have come to know the excitement of bowling.

Some players prefer the short approach and others the longer approach shot. Tim Gibbons is using a four step approach shot which will give him a little more power.

Studying For An Occupation

Many Madison students who were among the thousands of people looking for a job of their choice, found R.O.P. had something in store for them. R.O.P. (Regional Occupational Program) was set up for the individual looking for job training with no cost. All a student needed was to be sixteen or over and R.O.P. would teach them the basics of almost any trade with one to two credits that they can use toward graduation. Each year R.O.P. has helped about 180 students from Madison to get training for jobs around the community and elsewhere.

The R.O.P. has many different fields of training to choose from. For instance, at Madison we have Child Development Classes. Around the community and county, they have classes for technicians, interior and exterior design, computer operations, motorcycle repair, mechanics of all kinds, and much more. Students can enroll to attain entry-level job skills or improve existing skills and even for advanced training for most all jobs. Classes go on throughout the year. Students looking for more information concerning anything about R.O.P., found they could contact Lydia Williams who was the head of R.O.P. at Madison, or Barbara Hillman, who was the instructor for the Child Development Classes.

Not all students go on to college, and many found that R.O.P. gave them an opportunity to learn vocational skills that gave them an entry into occupations they found rewarding.

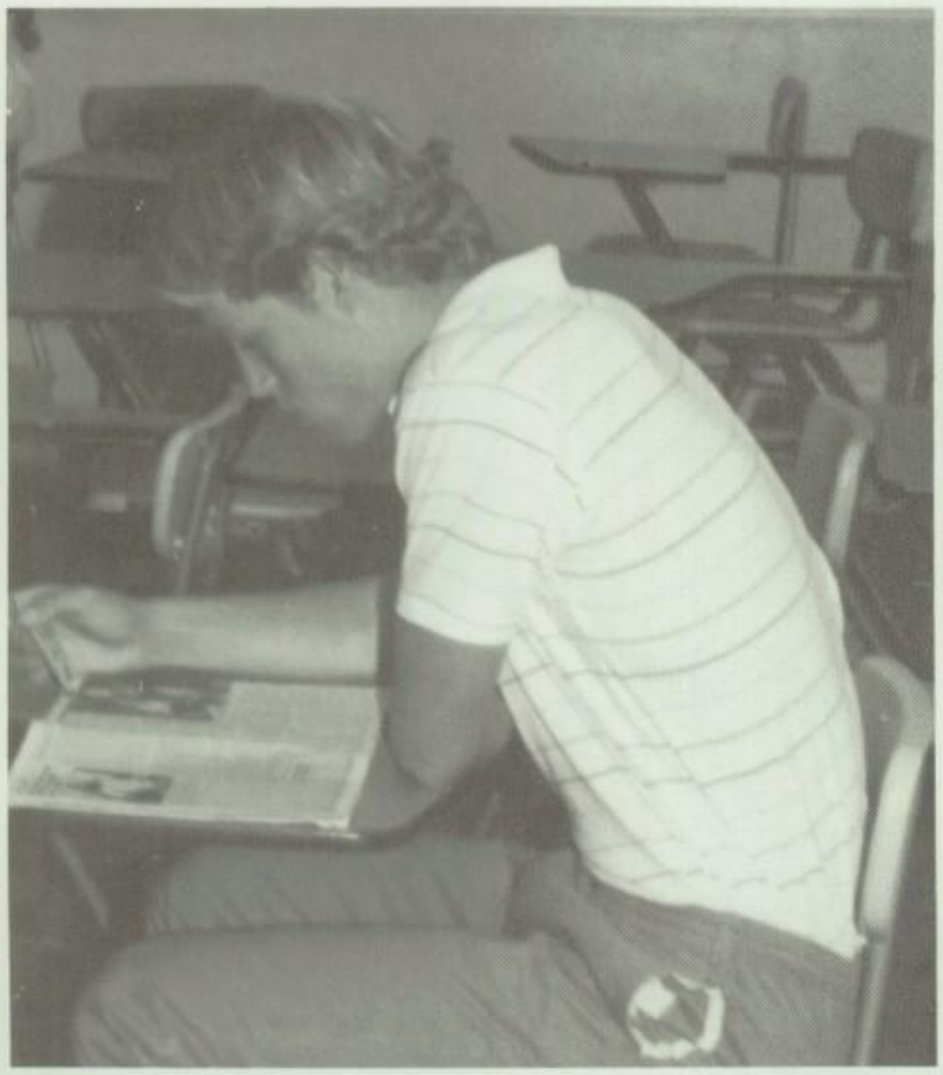
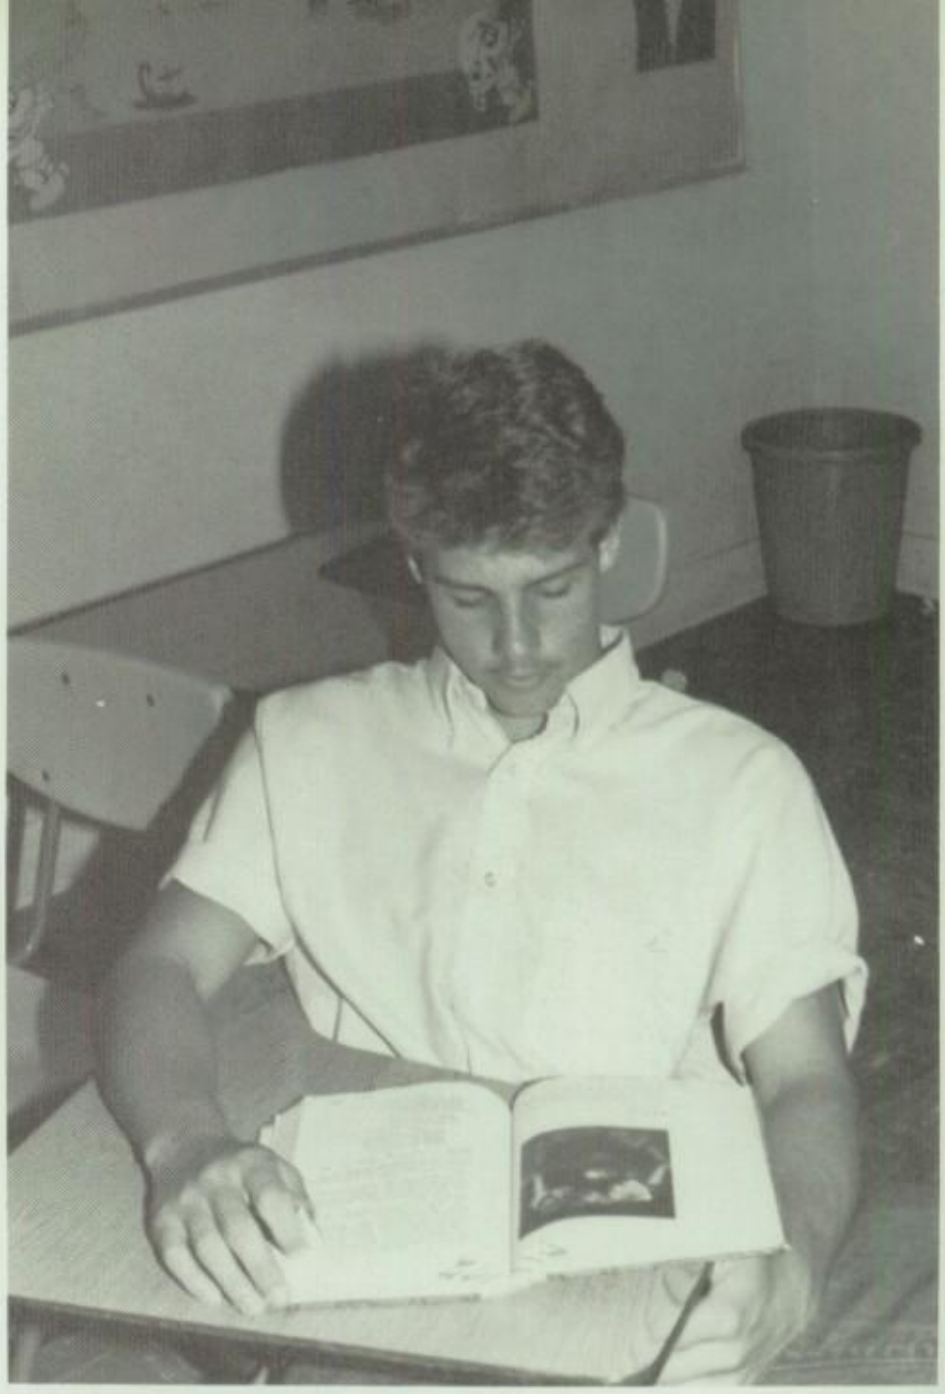
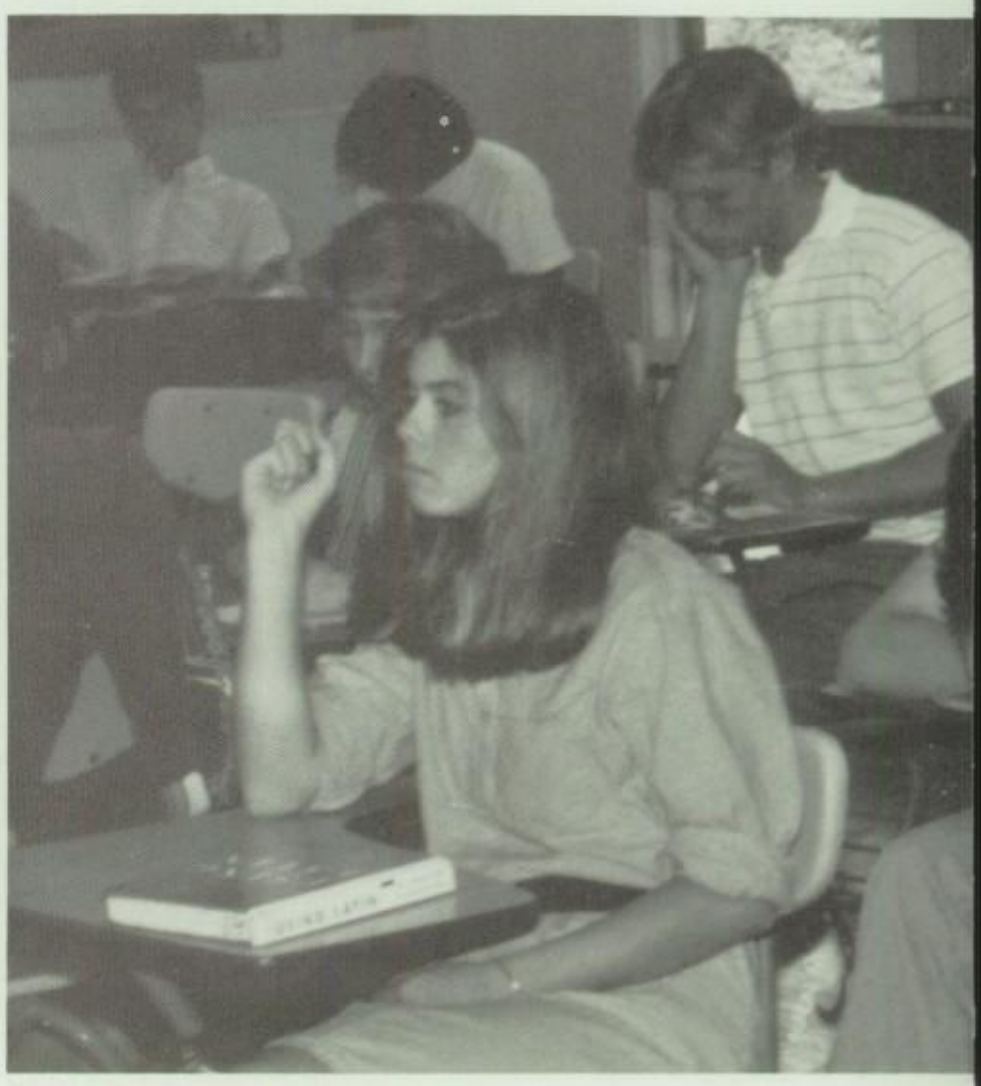
In Latin, the class is required to translate many mythological stories. One such myth is the story of Echo And Narcissus, which Bill Pimental studies.

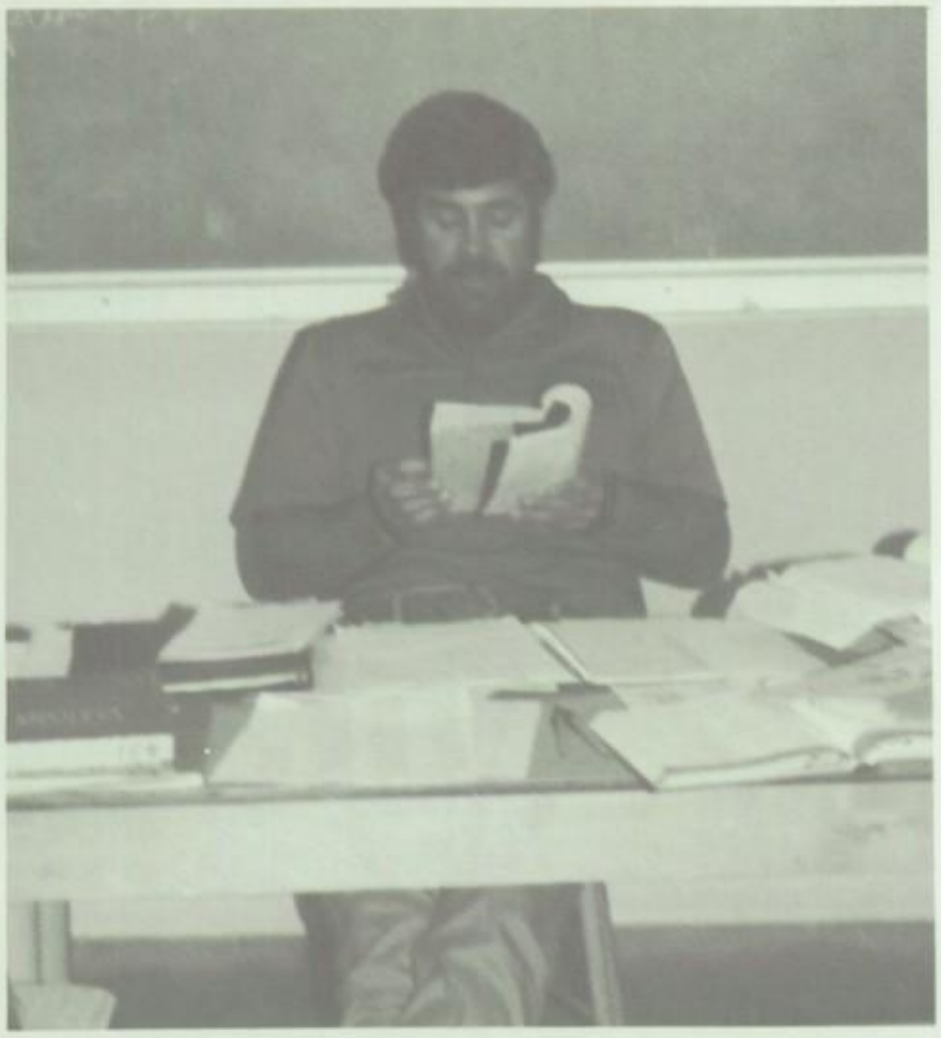
Just for fun Mr. Robinson set a little time aside for Latin Ludi (sports). Steve Kreger, the fearless Consul of the Latin Club, does research for the Latin football pool (no money was involved of course).

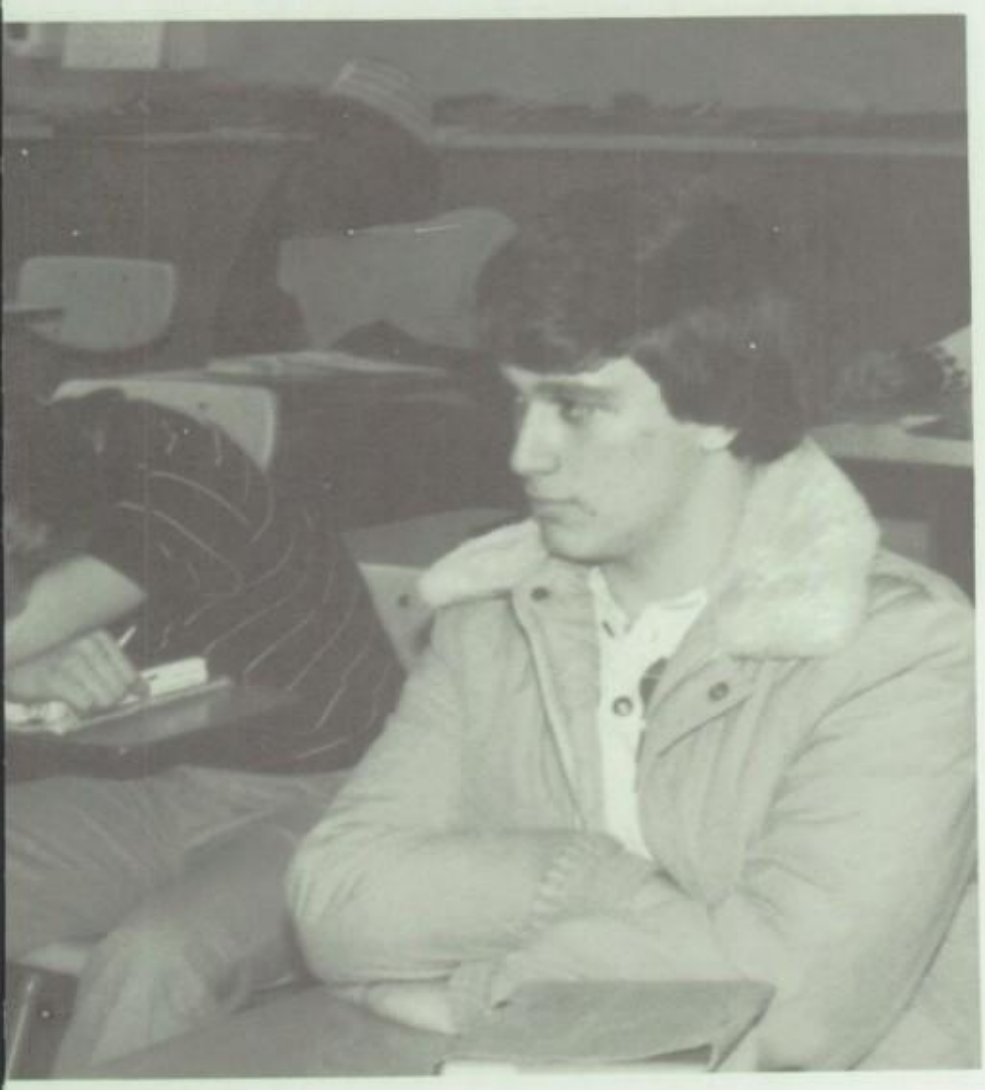






Every Thursday is Introspection Day. It is the day for the class to keep itself occupied. Tom Wirges, a three year Student, uses his time to catch up on Math.





Latin: A Class And A Club

What were the two things that Madison had that no other school in the San Diego School District had? The answer is a Latin class and a Latin Club. The reason we were lucky enough to have Latin was the fact that Mr. J. Robinson majored in Latin and decided to teach it. When Mr. Robinson was asked why he took Latin and then taught it, he said simply, "Latin is a lot of fun,"

Mr. Robinson liked his Latin classes at Madison so much he decided to invite all his Latin students home for a toga party. Everyone in the class was taught how to make togas, stolas, and tunics, all of which were fashionable in ancient Rome. Also at the party there was an ancient Roman play put on by the second and third year students. "But no evening is complete without sacrificing a couple of virgins," joked Mr. Robinson.

The club itself was set up for financing the party. Officers were elected to organize fund raisers and to organize the party. Steve Kreger was the Consul (President), with Marty Smith the Proconsul (Vice-President), at his side. Jamie Welsh was the Rerun Scriptor (Secretary). In charge of the money were two people, Charles Reading, and Sylvia Baer, who shared the office of Praefectus Aeranii (Treasury). Aside from dues, the Latin Club sold musical cards, which was the first time they got their money from another source other then dues. With the extra money to spend, the Latin Club had the best toga party in its 16 year history.

Besides being a lot of fun, Latin is very beneficial. It is a proven fact that people who have taken Latin do better in English. As well as doing better in English, students improved their SAT verbal scores. Many Latin words are used in science, such as the names of animals. Latin may be a dead language, but so many English words come from Latin, that a student does better in the world if he has taken a Latin class.

Latin is not always hard work. Often Mr. Robinson, who has taught for twenty years, reads stories out of Ovid Metamorphosis to the class.

Lecture time is usually a serious time in Latin. Jody Pimentel and Frank Iraci listen intently while Chris Bain falls asleep.

Potential

One of the most active clubs on campus in the 1983-84 school year was the speech club. The club was very successful but had even more potential. The club was made up of mostly sophomores who, in Mr. Steinmetz's opinion, were very good considering their experience. Although the sophomores were good, the real stars were the more experienced seniors.

The speech team was very well rounded. It was especially good in the Debate, Oratory, and Service Speech divisions.

The Speech Club was a well organized group, but the real efforts came from the individuals. When someone went on stage, he was by himself. Each individual competed in local competitions for trophies, or at the big competitions like the Lions Club, or the Rotary Club. There they competed for scholarships of $20,000 offered by each Club. At these matches, the students were up against students from most of California.

The Speech Club is not an easy club to be in and anyone who sticks it out and wins has to be admired. Besides winning the Rotary Club or the Lions Club competition, he practically gets a free ride to college.

Obviously there was a lot of speech giving in the Speech Club. Robert Valerio practices leisurely, in front of the class

The Speech Club was organized by an experienced senior. Kelli Lease, president of the club, starts a meeting

The atmosphere in speech class is very relaxed. Robert Holland and John Fisher try to be serious in front of the class.

Having experience in the Speech Club helps when its time to give oral reports. Here Rachel Laus and Doquen Nguyen give their presentation in World History.

Debating is common place in Speech Club. James Brandt sketches notes for his defense.

Most of the time the Speech Club students come from speech classes. But this year a good majority came from World History, which Mr. Steinmetz teaches here.

Creativity

What was there for me to do
When I couldn't see me and I couldn't hear you?
If you'd reach out to touch my hand
I'd try to make you understand . . .
I love the days and the feelings they make
The sounds and the smells, all for my sake.
If I want them to be all for me
I'll close my eyes and dream and dream . . .
Of days gone past, and days to come,
Of the people on earth and where they're from
Or just because and I wonder why . . .
Happiness causes laughter and sadness makes me cry.

Graduation Day

It's almost graduation day
Now's the time that we can say
We've done our best throughout the years
We've done a lot, some laughs, some tears.

We've shown our pride, and we're #1
And through all these times we've had some fun
But now it's time to go our own ways
To live our own lives through the rest of our days

We remember things that we have shared
And even those things that we have dared
But now's not the time to say "good-bye"
But say "See you later, Madison High."

Bethyl Mirchell

Wherever we go, whatever we do,
We'll both be together, me and you.

I laugh at your joys, you cry at my pain,
And we smile with each other, when the sky turns to rain.

We're two of a feather, yet none so apart.
You stand at a distance, but close in my heart,

I give you my woes, and together we share
And on my willfull shoulders your burdens I bear,

We laugh and cry and dream both as one,
Our memories are full though we've only begun.

We've thought it, we've lived it, we've hoped for it all,
I'm here if you need me, you're there should I fall.

But let it be known, 'till the earth comes to end,
You're the best of the best, because you're my friend.

SENIORS

Seniors

As a senior you have reached the pinnacle of high school. For thirteen years you have worked — not always so hard — to make it through school. The purpose though, of making it through school is different for everyone. But in any case, being a senior is fun, hectic and gratifying.

For most, the senior year is a chance to have some extra fun, let loose and get involved. Historically, seniors are the wildest and most avid students on campus; participating in all the activities and making sure not to miss out. In a sense, a senior is trying to sieze as much of that year as possible. This is tough because the senior year is also the most hectic.

There are so many things that a senior must accomplish. There are SAT's, college applications, job placement programs, financial aid applications, tests, the prom, and more. The senior is always looking toward a date. These dates come and go and the school year flies by. If these things are accomplished, and fun is had, the senior year can be extremely gratifying.

The climax of the senior year is graduation; although high school ends here, your life does not. There remains nearly a lifetime to learn more and utilize what you have learned. The senior year is definitely an unusual one, but is also one of the most anxiously awaited.

I've Been One-Hundred Feet Under

James Buckley supported his under water habits by doing a paper route. He is the kid who started scuba diving about the time he entered high school. When asked what influenced him, he said, "I guess it was Jacques Yves Cousteau. Ever since I was four, I never missed one of his specials."

In the ninth grade, James took a Marine Biology course under the direction of Craig Cary, who works for Scripps Institute of Oceanography. Mr. Cary was so impressed with James' work he let James work in a laboratory at Scripps for awhile. In the tenth grade, James took the Marine Biology course taught by Mr. Nowak at Madison.

James kept in touch with Craig Cary. When he got out of the eleventh grade, he started working at Scripps Aquarium as an Aquarium Specialist, with the recommendation from Mr. Cary.

At the aquarium he fed all the fish, including poisonous sea snakes and moray eels. He was even bitten by a moray eel. He collected data for scientists when they left town. One such experiment was feeding calcium to sharks and sea bass. The calcium made the sharks grow twice as fast as normal. James also did his own science fair project on sharks.

James plans on becoming an aqua culturist, and going to San Diego State to do his undergraduate work in that subject. After SDSU he plans on going to Scripps or the University of Hawaii to get a PHD.

Whose Duties Were Whose?

Did you vote for your Senior Class Officers? Did you vote for Pete Schell, Sheri Smith, Rose Sicat or Annjanette Flippen? It might have been all of them for different positions. Pete Schell was elected as Senior Class President. His duties were to work with the Senior Class to organize and plan all the senior activities throughout the year.

I bet your wondering who takes notes at the senior meetings? Well, the person who does that is Annjanette Flippen. She takes minutes, which is a rough copy of what was said during the meeting. Within three days Annjanette has to type them, and hand the notes to the advisor, Mr. Wolfe.

Sheri Smith was the Vice President of the Senior Class. She was chairperson for the ASB Ball. Sheri wanted to become an officer to become more involved with school activities. Sheri said, "It's a good feeling when I know I've helped to accomplish a dance or other activity that was successful."

I bet you have always wondered where your money went or who handles the money? It just could be Rose Sicat, who takes in the Senior Class fund raiser money. What does she do with it? Rose and the other officers pay the money for the senior prom, senior breakfast, and grad-nite. They tried to keep the cost of the bids down so everyone could go to all the activities.

adness, they are Madness.

Absolute Madness

"What we have achieved has come from us being nothing other then young kids who wanted to make some money making records", says G. "Suggs" McPyerson and Carl Smyth, (more commonly Known as "Chas Smash"), the lead singers in Madness. "We've never been overtly political, and don't write particular songs. We do write things that are social comments as such. We never liked the pose of being caring".

Madness, the Ska influenced band from London, England, came on an American tour this 1983 summer. (Ska is a mixture of Calypso and Reggae.) During their stay in San Diego, they played with Oingo Boingo and the Police at San Diego State University. The following day, they headlined their own show for Muscular Dystrophy in front of over 8,000 people in the Stadium parking lot.

When asked about their music, they said they grew up with the British Ska. Never having considered themselves a Ska band, they find themselves getting further and further away from it.

College Bound

In the 1980's, more seniors have been deciding to go straight to college after high school than ever before. With colleges crowded and entry becoming more difficult, students discovered it was best for them to start looking for a college in their Sophomore and Junior years. Seniors who have not planned ahead often discover at the beginning of their senior year that their applications are due now!

There are many things a student must consider when preparing to choose a college. In the junior year, most students take the PSAT which is a preparation for the SAT which is most important for those applying to a four year college. College is becoming more expensive, and there are many financial aid programs which should be considered well ahead of time. To decide where to go, a student should choose a major before chosing a college.

There are probably several thousand colleges in this country, so it is sometimes confusing for a student to pick the one that will benefit him the most. The counseling office has brochures for most of the colleges. Representatives of various colleges and trade schools visit Madison High School every year. They hold meetings with the students where the students are free to ask questions.

Students are encouraged to meet with representatives from various sized colleges to become familiar with the programs and requirements. It is always good to know what a four year school requires even though many students find it best to attend a local junior college or city college before enrolling in one of the large universities. Whatever school a student chooses, the counselors advise that the planning must start as early as the sophomore year.

At Madison's career center there are many brochures to help a student choose a college.

Life Can't Be All Work!

Students here at Madison took pleasure in a variety of interesting activities. They always found something to do with their time; whether here on campus or in their after-school hours. During the week students had to put up with tests, homework, and tardy sweeps but over the weekend they were looking for a good time.

When that final bell rang Friday afternoon it all began. The Friday afternoon football games were a must for most students. They saw our team at its highs and its lows. Friday night rolled around and most students went to parties at friend's houses or at the beach.

Many of the students went to clubs such as the Distillery, Studio 9, or Club Zu. They danced and enjoyed the company of their friends. Many students went to San Diego State University's weekend parties.

There were others who were more athletic and played softball, football, or tennis over the weekends. Still others would go out to dinner, while some liked to go to the movies most of the time. It was always fun to take a quick spin down to Tijuana, Rosarita, or some other Mexican town.

There was always Clairemont Theater as a last resort if the boredom got too great. Of course a student could always stay home and just relax.

Students had varied interests and sought pleasure in different ways. Whether they were at home, in a club, or at a party they all were just trying to have a little fun.

Sky Show VIII Sparks Up San Diego

KGB FM hosted Sky Show VIII at San Diego Jack Murphy Stadium on the 17th day of September. Thousands of rock-n-roll fans crowded the stadium to see the hot rocking show. The show got off to a great start with the Heavy Metal sound of Uriah Heep and Motley Crue. Eddie Money put on a good show and got everybody up and on their feet for the main performance of Def Leppard. It took an hour for Def Leppard to finally make their appearence. While waiting, the fans made trips to the cosession stands and bought refreshments.

They threw rolls of toilet paper over the crowd and hit a beach ball around to entertain themselves so they wouldn't get impatient or restless. When the curtains slowly opened, the fans cheered on Def Leppard to play some of their favorites. Def Leppard started with songs from their current album Pyromania and their earlier album High-n-Dry. After they performed for two hours, KGB FM put together a firework show for some 54,000 fans. The show, lasting for about forty-five minutes, was spectacular. One fan, Linda Quidachay, said, "Def Leppard and the fireworks sparked the sky's of the stadium with a successful show." This was the party of the year!

T.J. Scalice and Tony Ceballos wear their Sky Show shirts, showing that they were there.

Living German Style

Germany is a beautiful country in central Europe. It consists of West Germany and East Germany. West Germany has a democratic government and out numbers East Germany in population. East Germany has a communist government and is largely under Russian control.

Last summer Corey Nettles spent two months in West Germany. She lived with two families. Corey said, "I enjoyed this much more because it showed how the German families really live not just in a tourist's view." Corey visited the schools there and found that their schools go up to grade thirteen, and to graduate a student must pass an examination. If they don't pass they must take the grade over again. The schools are much more rigid and they do not have extra curricular activities. Sports are taught in physical education but are not an elective choice.

On the weekends Corey went to some local discos and pubs. She found that the drinking age in Germany is sixteen years of age but the kids don't abuse it. Corey went to Krimes, which is a big summer festival where there is dancing, good food and drinking. "It was great. I had a good time."

Germany is a beauriful country with world famous scenic areas such as the Black Forest, The Bavarian Alps and the Rhine River. Corey suggests, "There is no better way to get to know a country and it's people than to live with them."

The Tragic Loss Of Flight 007

Somewhere in the Sea of Japan is a Black Box, its actual color is orange, from Korean airlines 007. The flight data inside would probably answer some of the questions about how and why the wayward aircraft met its fate.

On August 31, 1983, in New York airport, there was a Korean Airline Boeing 747, carrying 269 passengers. It was enroute to Seoul, with a stopover in Anchorage, Alaska. When Flight 007 left US territory it carried at least 61 American passengers, including a US Congressman. It never reached Seoul. Somewhere over the Sea of Japan, south of Sakhlin Island, it was shot from the sky by a Russian Fighter plane. The incident seemed to be a crime against all humanity, a violation of the fundamental rules of the air on which all the world depends on the crowded skies of the jet age.

Somewhere in the hours after leaving Alaska, the airliner got off course, and when they thought they were passing over Japan, the airliner violated the airspace of the USSR. Why did KAL flight 007 stray so far off its proper course? In 90% of such cases, the deviation is attributed to pilot error. The INS Computer is programmed by the crew at the beginning of the flight. The Computer is fed the plane's latitude at take-off and the coordinates of points along the planes scheduled route. The initial information fed into the Korean Airlines computer at Anchorage was correct. Flight 007 hit the first five points as planned, but then Flight 007 apparently began to stray. A Soviet fighter tracked the plane, reported to its base, and was told to fire on the airliner.

The waterproof container of the Black Box is heavily reinforced to survive impact and ocean depths down to 20,000 feet. For 30 days it will automatically emitt a sonar signal that can be heard as far as five miles. Many of these boxes have been recovered in the past. If the sea of Japan gives up this Black Box some of the mystery surrounding flight 007 may be answered.

Jock Of All Trades

How many people who attended Madison went to the finals of the Punt, Pass, and Kick contest? How many people from Madison have been: All CIF pitcher, All League pitcher, on the Sentinel Kiwanas team, on the Union/Tribune first team, and talked to by Stanford, USC, SDSU, and University of Arizona to play baseball for their team? How many surfers who went to Madison could honestly say they did a lay-back in a tube? The answer to all these questions is one, Michael Erb.

Mike Erb went to see the Pittsburg Steelers beat the Dallas Cowboys in Super Bowl X. During half-time he competed in the Punt, Pass and Kick contest. It was very competitive; Mike became runner-up after he lost by only one yard.

Even though Mike could play football well, he discovered a new sport, surfing. He started surfing in the eighth grade, and had gotten really good by high school. Mike said he likes surfing because, "It is something to do during the morning, and it is just a lot of fun." Mike also said, "Surfing is more fun than baseball but I like what I have accomplished in baseball. Besides, I've been playing ball since I was six."

Mike worked very hard during his senior year to improve his baseball, especially his pitching ability. He worked out four days a week after school until the season started. He was most likely one of the best players the Mad-house ever had. When talking to Mike, it was very apparent that he was committed to do his best, and always knew he had room to improve.

They Came From Down Under

The popular Men At Work song, "Down Under," was just one of the songs the crowd sang outside the Armory, as the men from the land down under did the unthinkable. The men from the land down under were the crew of Australia II, and the unthinkable was the winning of the America's Cup. So what you say. Well, what makes this particular boat race so special was the fact that the U.S. has won the America's Cup since 1851, which means the U.S. has dominated this competition for 132 years.

The skipper of the 12-meter American yacht, Liberty, was San Diegan Dennis Conner. Conner was the hero, winning America's Cup with a 4-1 victory over the Australian yacht, Freedom, three years ago. But on Monday, September 26, 1983, Conner just had one of those days. Unfortunately, it will be remembered as a day Conner lost America's Cup. Conner didn't lose because he was a bad skipper, in fact, he is one of the best. He lost simply because Australia II was a better boat.

The American's yacht, Liberty, is a conventional 12-meter yacht, quite different from Australia II, which was designed by Ben Lexen. The difference lies in the keel. Australia II's keel has wings that jut out from the bottom and the side, and has a rounded nose. These characteristics give the boat a lift. This lift makes it easier for it to glide over the water, and inevitably faster.

After winning 3 races each, Liberty, and Australia II went for the tie breaker September 26, 1983, on Rhode Island Sound. Liberty quickly pulled out in front using every wind shift and angle with skill. Liberty led by 57 seconds after four legs. The dying breezes in the next and the last leg worked against Liberty, and the Australia's II keel payed off as it passed Liberty to win. Australia II skipper, John Bertrand, gave Australia what Australia's Prime Minister called, "One of the greatest moments in sporting history."

Australia II's crew consisted of the skipper, John Bertrand, the tactician, Hugh Treharne, the navigator, Grant Simmer, and the mainsheet trimmer Colin Beashel.

Even if we changed the design of our boat, or changed to a different day for better weather conditions, there is one thing we can't change . . . the fact that the men from down under "keeled" us.

ASB conducted many activities during lunch this year. One was the jelly bean hunt.

New Kids

In Town

The bell rang on September 12, 1983 and the students at Madison knew they were back in school. The seniors casually strolled to class, the juniors briskly walked and the sophomores were running with an updated version of the school map.

We were all sophomores at one time, not knowing the restrooms from the gymnasium. Well, this year the sophomores learned where the gym was, because that was the spot where the sophomore orientation took place. It was a time to get the new students involved and accustomed to their new school. The orientation introduced clubs and sports that were available to the tenth graders. Speakers gave short talks on their particular group or activity. A few of the campus organizations that were introduced were, The Talon, The Drama Club and The Yearbook. The new principal had a few words to say and then started a small war between the two sides of the gym over who could say Madison Warhawks the loudest. Needless to say, it was a tie; but he really got those sophomores yelling. Along with the new principal, Mr. Raleigh, the other new staff members were introduced and the class of "86" was once again tested for spirit. Mr. Wolfe asked the question, "Does this class have spirit?" The answer was a definite "YES!" The next question was, "Is this class dead?" The answer was a jumble of no and yes, but the yes soon drowned out the no.

The sophomores were welcomed to the school once again like they have always been and will always be. The orientation made the sophomores feel more at home. WELCOME TO THE MADHOUSE, CLASS OF "86!"

Who's Got The Spirit?

"We really appreciate their help!" "They really help get the rest of the crowd going!" These were just a few of the statements made by the Varsity Cheerleaders when asked their opinion of the Pep Squad. The Pep Squad consisted of a number of students whose main purpose during the course of the football games was to generate excitement and enthusiasm throughout the stands.

Not only does the Pep Squad generate spirit, but they also get a reserved spot in the stands on the fifty yard line, and can be heard from the "enemies" side.

With all of them dressed in a colorful combination of navy blue, white, and gray, they make a solid block in the middle of the stands. All of them have some kind of shaker in their hands, ranging from a Varsity Cheerleader Pom Pon to a Pep shaker that the J.V. Cheerleaders sell. Every Varsity Football player would agree that their help was needed and indeed was appreciated by all on the team. Their enthusiasum helped lead the Varsity Warhawks to victories. Rain or shine, they were always there, and always helped support the Hawks, no matter what the score.

It's An Experience

Have you ever wondered what it would be like to live in a foreign country? Leaving behind your family, friends and customs, you would arrive in a completely new environment where the people, customs and atmosphere are completely different.

Two students who have ventured out of their homeland, Stergios Barbouris from Cyprus, a republic within the Commonwealth Nations and the third largest island in the Mediterranean, and Helena Nordman from Finland, were two of the many AFS Exchange Students in the past few years who have traveled to the United States and have attended Madison High During their senior year.

Stergios and Helena, both excellent students, joined AFS, American Field Service, for the main reason that they wished to travel and meet new people, make new friends, but mostly for the excitement and adventure that goes along with traveling to another country. "I joined AFS because it is a good experience to be independent and a challenge to be on your own," said Stergios. Living with an American family, Stergios and Helena graduated with the Class of 84.

American people are not always highly respected by people of other countries. They often look on Americans as not very intelligent and rude. Helena said, "In my country, the people say very negative things about the U.S. but it is not all true. People are the same all over the world, whether you live in Finland or the U.S."

They both enjoyed their stay in the U.S. When asked what they would best remember about America, Stergios said, "The Food!" While patting his stomach, he added, "I gained weight ever since I came here." Helena smiled at Stergios' statement. She said, "The people in America are really nice. I really like it here." She wished to add:

I have had a fantastic year
here together with you,
A memory for my whole life.
Thank you everybody for it.
Love Helena

Break Dancing

The latest dance craze, which combines mime, acrobatics, and great energy is the Break Dance. Break dancing consists of several dance movements on the ground. Break dancers practiced months of hard, daring work until they had the precise movements mastered. The movements done in break-dancing are spinning on the back, spinning on the head which is like getting into a hand stand and twirling like a top. Also there is spining on the knees and on one hand while the rest of the body is balanced on one arm. There is also the "centipede", when the dancer lays on his chest with his legs in the air and slowly lets his legs down in a wavey position. There is the "kick-worm", where the dancer is on his stomach with his feet tightly together and kicks his legs up so that he moves forward in a wave like motion. Break dancing has actually been around for ten years. It was developed on the streets of both the East and West Coast. Break dancing is popular with both girls and boys from the age of thirteen to nineteen. A short break-dancing segment in the film, Flash Dance, catapulted the street art into a world-wide phenomenon. In New York, a street breaker could dance on a street corner and make as much as thirty dollars a night if he is not bothered by the police. A group of breakers could put a show on for a party and earn as much as four hundred dollars. Break dancing has arrived in San Diego and is becoming the highlight of many an occassion.

Being An Artist Isn't Easy

Have you always wondered who was the talented artist drawing our satirical football pep ribbons, the Talon comic strip "Back to Basics" or even the "Lenny Rooster, the cock of the eighties comic strip found in the 91X magazine? Brad C. sound familiar? Completely written out, his name is Brad Constantine.

Whether it was the sign board in the lunchcourt that needed his artistic touch, or the various designing, lettering, and comic jobs he was asked to do by fellow students and staff members, Brad Constantine was the student first in mind. "When I'm limited to a customer's demand, I must conform and interpret their ideas. This limits my output of creativity but I can draw it using my 'original?' style and change it around a bit. That helps me draw it better!"

Brad has had a lot of training in art, ranging from cartoons to paintings, and draws as much serious art work at home as he does cartoons at school. Brad hopes to go into animation and eventually turn a dream into reality by working for Walt Disney or the Don Bluth Studios (makers of the video game Dragon's Lair).

Brad did not become serious about art until the eighth or ninth grade. From that time on, Brad has played an important role in sharing his remarkable artistic ability with friends, students and staff. Without Brad C., Madison would not have had the opportunity to experience the joy expressed in Brad's art work, that can't help but make us smile. "A lot of people think art comes easy for me and that I can just draw something and not even think about what I'm doing. Drawing is very exhausting mentally and my creativity wears down very quickly! But in the end it's worth it!!!

It's Too Expensive

Going to college can be expensive and just the sight of the yearly tuition can leave almost anyone in complete dismay — with eyes and mouth wide open while looking over the large numbers following the dollar sign. Almost spontaneously the saying, "I can't afford to go to that college. It's too expensive!" manifests itself into a negative outlook towards that paricular college. Yet many students found this need not be so for aid existed to help a student manage the costs of college.

All college bound students became aware of financial aid programs and all were encouraged to apply. Specific eligibility requirements varied from program to program and applicants needed to apply before receiving notification of acceptance to a college. Financial aid was available usually in December and the financial aid packet was mailed after January 1.

The major form a student encountered when applying for financial assistance in California was the SAAC, Student Aid Application for California. This form was required of all financial aid applicants and was used as a need analysis tool for programs such as Pell Grant, California Grants A, B, C, EOP Grant (Educational Opportunity Program), scholarships and many others.

Students discovered they did not need to be from a low-income family to qualify for financial aid, but they did have to have "financial need." Their "need" was the difference between what it costs to attend a particular college and what they and their family was expected to contribute towards their education.

The cost of tuition to attend a college should not be a factor, expecially when a student is building a foundation as important as his future. Financial aid is abundant and students discovered that visiting their counselor could help them plan a more successful future.

Our modern world seems to be getting tougher. Education it seems must also get tougher. To ensure that each student is learning all he can, schools everywhere have set higher standards to meet the requirements for graduation. Some of the areas our local school board is trying to strengthen are: Science, Math, Comprehensive Reading Skills and Homework in all classes. Additional courses are required in science and mathematics. The Board feels that homework is a large part of the educational program, and should be assigned on a regular basis, from a few minutes in the primary grades, to two or more hours per day in high school. In an attempt to improve reading skills, one book a month, read outside of school, is required of each student.

The credits required for graduation are still increasing. Units required went from 40-42, and have now been increased to 44 for students now in the seventh grade. The amount of work required to pass a particular class has also gone up. As well as the competency tests a student must pass to graduate, class competencies are now being initiated. The amount of work necessary to pass a class is still totally up to the teacher, but now competency in course content is also expected. Homework and increased expectations are intended to encourage voluntary student initiative and responsibility outside of the classroom.

Battle Of

The Bonds

Bond is back, both of them. Roger Moore continued his mastery on the srceen in Octopussy, while Sean Connery returned for the first time since staring in Diamonds are Forever. The movies were hyped as the Battle of the Bonds.

Neither Moore nor Connery felt that they were competing against each other. In fact they both had become good friends since Moore first started playing James Bond in Live and Let Die. Octopussy did gross more money than Never Say Never Again. Octopussy became the all-time money maker of Bond films.

Whether the two movies competed or not, they provided excellent entertainment during this school year. Bond really never left, and with movies like these he never will.

Snap, Krackle, Pop and the rest of the Rice Krispies invaded Madison on Halloween from Clairmont.

The Greatest Spectacle In Sports

Growing so extremely expenisve that they have been threatening to collapse under their own deficits, the Olympic Games have not been at such risk since AD 395 when the athleres grumbling displeasure with olive wreath prizes caused Roman Emperor Theodusius I to stop the competition for 1,502 years. Baron Pierre de Coubertin, a French idealist whose practical side was under rated, revived the olympics in 1896.

The upcoming 1984 Olympic Games must be less expensive. The games start from nothing; $300,000 in debt, no employees, no phones, no plan. The number one income source for the 1984 Olympics has been the government. Other countries have had lotteries. The Los Angeles Olympics are not able to have lotteries because it is against the law in the state of California. Another source of income has been donations. The Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee decided to refuse charity from anyone. The money from 200,000 ticket applications was put in the bank, and the customers were notified by the end of November which events they had tickets to.

The game's symbol and mascot, Sam the Olympic Eagle, was created by Disney. Sam is an attractive symbol, but a little less endearing than Moscow's "Misha Bear."

Without benifit of mass transit, anywhere from 400,000 to 600,000 daily visitors will expand the city's population. California State Senator, Alan Cranston said, "The Games have all the potential of turning Los Angeles into the largest parking lot in the U.S."

There is both charm and saddness in getting the olympics together. It is one gigantic piece of work that needs to be done only once, and then it is over — until it is it starts all over again in another town or country where the olympics will next take place.

Making The Choice

When it comes down to asking the high school students what they're going to do after high school, the majority answer, "off to UCSD," or "Cal State," or most likely, "Mesa College for a general education." The decision is one that is difficult and a bit scary. But as in any school, there are those who will say they're going to take a vacation, or go to work full time. The choice between college or a job can be difficult simply because choosing college means meeting tremendous financial difficulties. Students that do not choose college, however, may find that a college degree would have helped greatly in making a career move. Then, of course, there are those who get lucky and find a wealthy individual and marry for money.

There are many choices after high school and that makes deciding even tougher. Although the majority of Madison students do intend to go to college, there are some who don't want to expand their education. Maybe because high school was enough, or they have plans to enter directly into a promising career. Whatever choice a student makes, many facts must be considered to guarantee success for the future.

Working Toward Prosperity

The most important thing to a teenager, these days, seems to be getting and holding a job. For most, this is a difficult task. Jobs are not easy to come by and when you do get a job, it is an even more difficult task keeping it.

The majority of students here at Madison are working and they do, sometimes find it time consuming and difficult. More students apply at fast food places than anywhere else, this being because it's easy to get a job in fastfood. There are also many fast food chains to choose from and they are ideal for long or short term positions.

Out of the many students here at Madison, a few are depending on their jobs to supply money for their clothes and lunches for the school year. Many parents are finding money for these things very hard to come by. Can you count how many times you've heard your parents say, "Money doesn't grow on trees!" More and more teenagers are finding this statement true and are looking hard for jobs. Yet some parents are able to buy their kids necessities. The kids find that getting a job can mean more spending money for themselves. It can also create a challenge or simply something to do with spare time.

Gary Sima, a senior here at Madison, finds his work at Longs Drugs a tiring yet worthwhile job. Gary spends up to twenty hours a week working in various departments throughout the store. Laura Markle, also a senior works in a bank, which can be a difficult job at times. But Laura is confident that she can handle it.

Although mostly seniors worry about jobs, there are many juniors and sophomores holding down jobs from car wash attendants to sales clerks in shoe stores. All of these high school jobs are helping students in many ways and that does include that gigantic step into "the big cruel world."

1984 Is Here

In the year 1949, a writer named George Orwell, wrote a novel and created an imaginary world that is completely convincing, from the first page to the last. The world has been shocked at the realism of the book. George Orwell was not a prophet, and didn't claim to be. If not prophecy, what is 1984? It was, as many have noticed, a warning; a warning about the future of human freedom in the world, political organization and technology can manufacture power in dimensions that would have stunned the imaginations of earlier ages.

Although the predictions made are frightening and very lifelike, they have not been proven true, so there is actually no reason to be afraid, even though a lot of the people who have read the book are afraid of the events Orwell predicts. Orwell thinks most people are not consciously aware of the threat of destruction to our civilization — if not of all mankind — by thermoneuclear weapons as they exist today and as they are being developed in increasingly frightful proportions. Some believe that just because modern warfare is so destructive, war is impossible; others declare that even if sixty or seventy million Americans were killed in the first one or two days of a nuclear war, there is still not a reason to believe that life would not go on as before after the first shock has been overcome.

The contribution of Orwell which is most immediately relevant for the year 1984 and for the next five to fifteen years is the connection he makes between the dictatorial society of 1984 and atomic war. Orwell wrote 1984 after the discovery of thermonuclear weapons.

Orwell, like the authors of other negative Utopias, is not a prophet of disaster. He wants to warn and to awaken us. The hope can be realized only by recognizing the danger. So 1984 reaches us, the danger of a society of automatons who will have lost every trace of individuality, of love, of critical thought, and yet who will be aware of it because of "doublethink", which means the power of holding two contradictory beliefs in ones mind simultaneously, and accepting both of them.

1984 will truly be a year of changes, and people are now thinking of what would happen if there actually was a nuclear war.

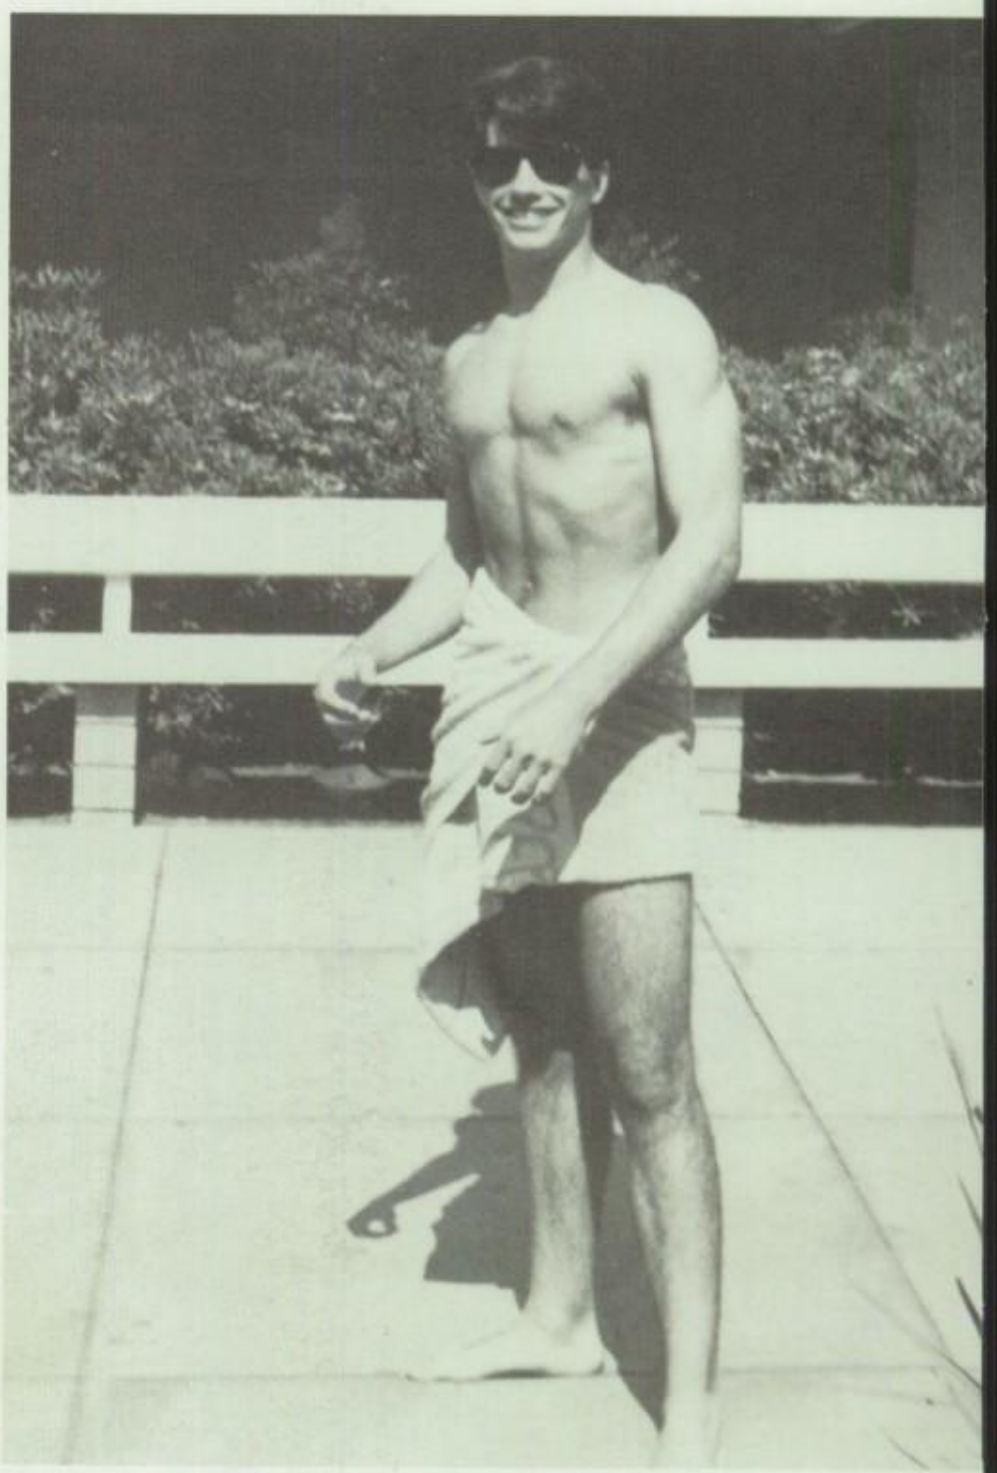
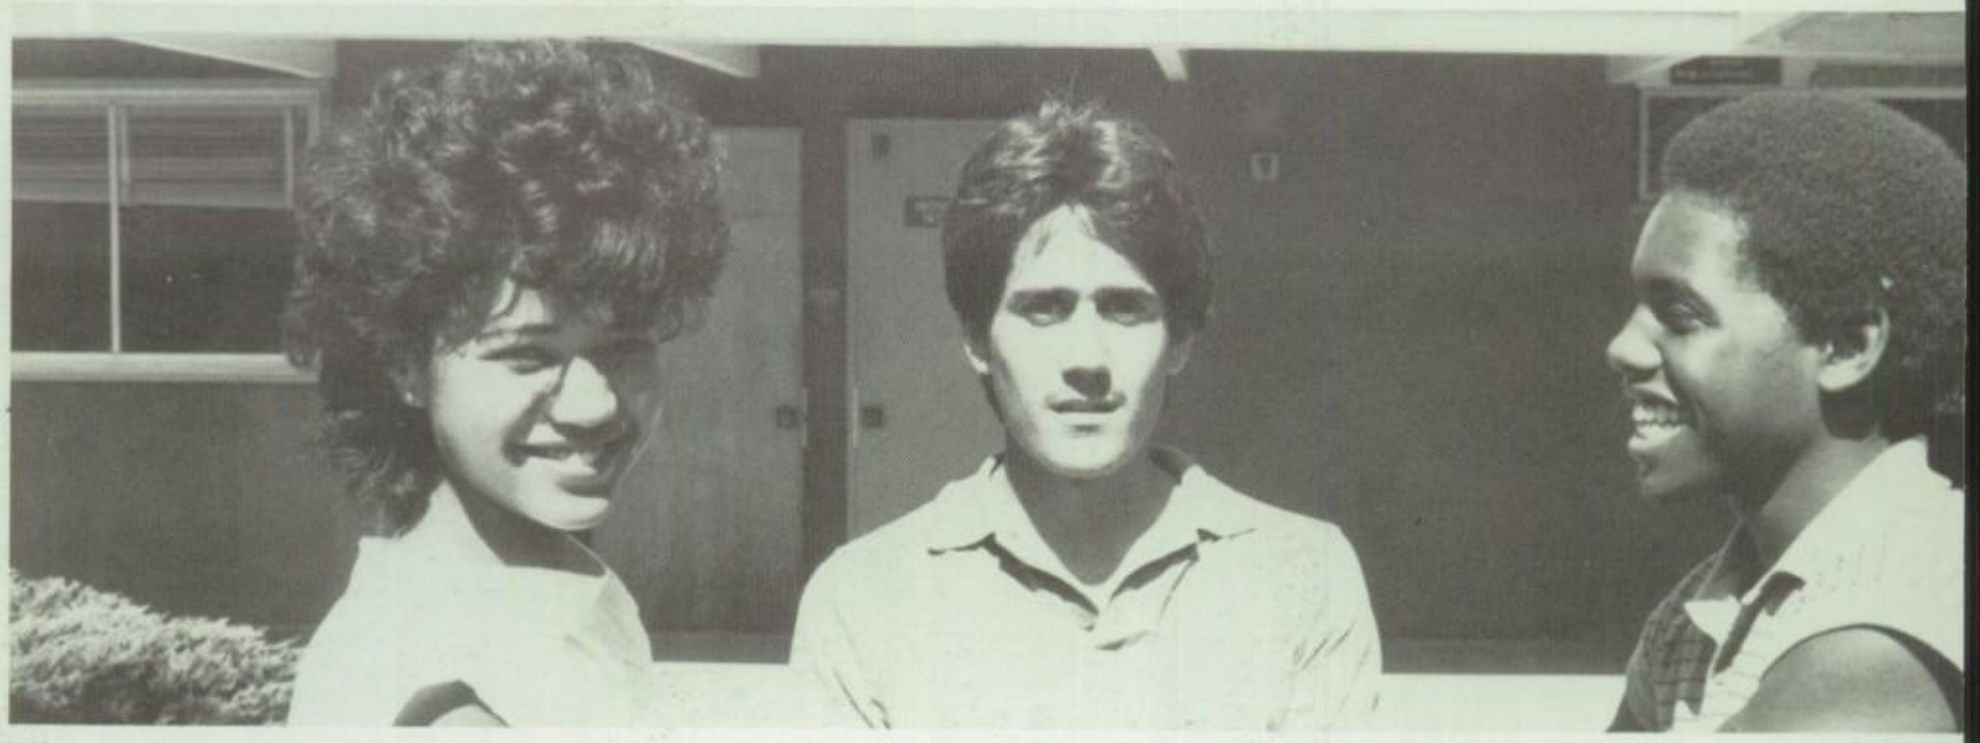
Senior Memories

This section is not respected by yearbook or journalism authorities. It has also been a tradition of the Prospectus for many years. Even though change is one of the most significant principles of this book, color is a greater one. In this case, color in the sense of attitude, feeling, and character. Everyone of us has a different color; different attitudes, feelings, characteristics, and different memories. This section gives the seniors the opportunity to express their color, not only of their senior year, but of all their years in school. That is far more important than pleasing critics or changing tradition.





After disappointingly waiting in anticipation, a hungry David Finley realizes that Judy Flor has already devoured the cheesecake.

Although there are different styles of dressing, Pat Rogers models the towel style.

The talon editor Eddie Fernandez and yearbook staff members Dominique Lett and Daryl Newsome bring an end to the traditional rivalry between the prospectus staff and Talon staff.

Kuykendall, Kendra - As I look back and remember all the good rimes I had starring in the 10th grd, all of my friends like VD, DP, SD, SS, TM and TH, made everything real live like for me because they are my ''Homegrls.'' Being the hags of the school, getting Bobed our, and always ''D''ing down was the kids. When PrudeePuff came in my Jr year SS, T.M, and SD Really did a good job. And afterwards going ro ski beach and celebrating was the best part, can't wair until this year. V.D. being my #1 Homegrl was always a very cool chick, and she will always be my #1. D.P. is my ACE Partner and she has been for quite a while. And I can't forget all my Homeboys for the Madness-House, like R.R., S.D., DS, M.S., D.L., M.S, were always smooth. T.H. my other Homegrl left the school at the beginning of my senior year and I really miss her because she was in the pushed me and helped me our. My weekend with V.D. was the first rime I spend with my homegrl and it was just grear.

Nguyen, Chan V. How can I forget my years at Madson as well as my first three years in the USA. For strangers, btter know my name now before it's too late. It's me. A nonsad element moving between parallel lines, sometimes moving up and down along the sine curve increasing in acceleration towards my "rendevous aved Godot!" My special thanks to Mr. Brown, Ms. Ms. Connell, Mr. Dean, Mrs. Fakis, Mr. Oyler, Mrs. Rosser, Mr. Robinson and Mlle. Terkelson. Bonnes vacanzes, Bon voyage a l'universite.

Nguyen, Thien D. Thanks A.A. for the good time. You are the cutest and also the craziest. Hey Ron are we primo dono or what! If we keep it up we will be playing with those "pro" boys. A.Q. you are a "Sweeny Poin" Thank you, God!!!

Nguyen, Thu - So many memories but no words to express. Graduation is near and I'm feeling depressed. Where have all the years gone in Physics and Lit? Where we have laughs and also some "firs." Three years at Madison with all the teachers toe, and Christmas caroling down Stacey's lane, college prep., ASB Ball, graduation, prom, . . . Goodbye, Madison . . .

Palacios, Liz - All my love and thanks to all my family. Friends from MHS, SA, PV, EA, CS, SC, Nando, SG. Good Luck Always, Friends Forever. Good times with my friends from CHS. VD, TI, FM, CP, VY, MP, NC, TC. Sharing good & Bad times with my Best Friend POLC. Thank You. Friends Always. Going to Zo with cousins & friends. Memories of DG. Meeting JA. Thanks for the good times. Special Feelings.

Palestini, Louis - To Parry M. thanks for all of these great memories of the years we've been together, Luv ya. To G.S AND A.F. Keep up the water sports, see you around G.S., and you A.F., when you get back from AZ. Hope to see you guys around, now that we go our own ways. P.M., grad night is always going to be a night to remember. And hopefully we will always have our very special nights to remember for a long time. Quang, Tung - This is my last year at Madison. I still remember when I first came to this school and I couldn't understand my teachers or my classmates. However I still enjoyed school. Gradually I was able to learn English and catch up with my classmates. My memories of Madison will always be with me. I made some friends here. I will always remember my teachers and classmates. I believe Madison is the best school in San Diego.

Jazz Is Back!

Jazz spelled backwards is zzaj, but what does that have to do with our Madison campus. Well, it's the name of a group of extremely talented fussion jazz artists. What is fussion jazz? In the words of co-band leader Eric Lytle, "It's a mix between jazz and soul".

Eric Lytle and his father, Cecil Lytle, a very prominent pianist who has performed concerts in Europe, were the two who formed the band. Eric, who plays the bass, spoke with a few of his friends here at Madison and his band began to form. He met Jason Arcidiano one day in his biology class and talked to him about the group. Jason agreed to play the trumper in their newly sprouting band. Eric also talked with Mark Ishihara, and old friend since choldhood, who played the saxophone and he too wanted to play in the band. Then they needed a drummer and a lead guitarist; Mark found another Mark, Mark McClosky, to play with them. Now they needed only to find a drummer to be complete. Mr. Lytle saw a young Madison student one day with superb talent. He immediately initiated Brett Sanders into the band as their drummer; so it was complete.

The talent was there but had yet to be refined into excellent jazz music. They worked hard at it. Cecil Lytle pushed them hard and they learned and progressed, and refined their talents. So the band evolved from a backwards jazz group with no name into a real band with a name spelled backwards.

Though they're only playing for the pleasure of playing music they have done many shows. They have performed at UCSD several times. They've done many benefits and they've played at a few private parties.

They work really hard at improving their music, and playing skills. Cecil Lytle, a perfectionist, also works very diligently with them. So the next time someone asks what jazz spelled backwards is, you'll know the answer.

At first Linda Quidachay thought that it would be just another summer, going out with friends and going to the beach to get a tan, until her father mentioned to her taht she could run for Miss Guam to represent the Chamorro Club of L.A. All she had to do was sell as many tickets as she could, which were counted as votes, and she would have the equal chance of winning the contest and get crowned Miss Guam from the Chamorro Club of L.A. Well, Linda sold a large amount of tickets and worked very hard to gain her goal. The day of June , 1983 came and Linda drove up to Long Beach and went aboard the Queen Mary to see if her hard work had paid off. On stage Linda stood with two other young ladies, knee's knocking and heart beating faster then normal. The annoucement was made that Linda had sold the most tickets and would be crowned Miss Guam. She not only won 40% of the money she had collected from her supporters, but a roundtrip ticket to Guam for three weeks. Linda, a very excited young lady, was pleased and proud. On the plane the new Miss Guam sat for thirteen hours until she arrived in Guam. There, not only did she get greeted and welcomed by people, but she arrived on the day of the Guamanian liberation, a celebration like our fourth of July. Many girls who had won from other counties were there to meet one another and help celebrate the island's liberation day. Overall Linda had a very unusual, but unique summer, her summer of 1983 will be remembered for a long time. She will return next year in June to crown the Miss Guam of 1984-1985. To Linda, "This was a great honor-to represent my island Guam, in a respectful way."

Winning the competition for "Miss Guam" 1983, Linda Quidachy still enjoys student life at Madison.

In Memory

John Fitzgerald Kennedy was born on May 29, 1917 in Brookline, Massachusetts. In January of 1960, he became the thirty-fifth President of the United States, and the first Catholic one.

Some of his many accomplishments were: establishing the Peace Corps, raising the minimum wage, getting the Russian Missels out of Cuba, and libealizing social security benefits. He also encouraged people to stand up for their country and do things to help it, rather than expecting it to help them, as he said in his inaugral speech, "Ask not what your country can do for you; ask what you can do for your country."

Kennedy inspired many young college-educated people to return to government service, but that wasn't all. They looked up to him. Some even cut their hair like his.

Unfortunately, on November 22, 1963, the Democrat's life was cut short. He was the fourth president to be the victim of an assassin. He had only served 1,037 days as President.

Obviously John F. Kennedy did something right, something that the people agreed with in his short term as President of the United States, for twenty years later, he is still very much remembered.

Why were there television movies and shows on about his life and death? Why were there magazine articles written about "The 20th Anniversary of his deathday?" Maybe it was because there are so many unanswerable questions about him: "What might have happened had he lived longer?" "Why was he killed?" "Did the assassin, Lee Harvey Oswald, act alone, or was it part of a conspiracy?" Maybe we'll never know, but the interest in him this year indicates that his accomplishments and the questions about his death will not be soon forgotten.

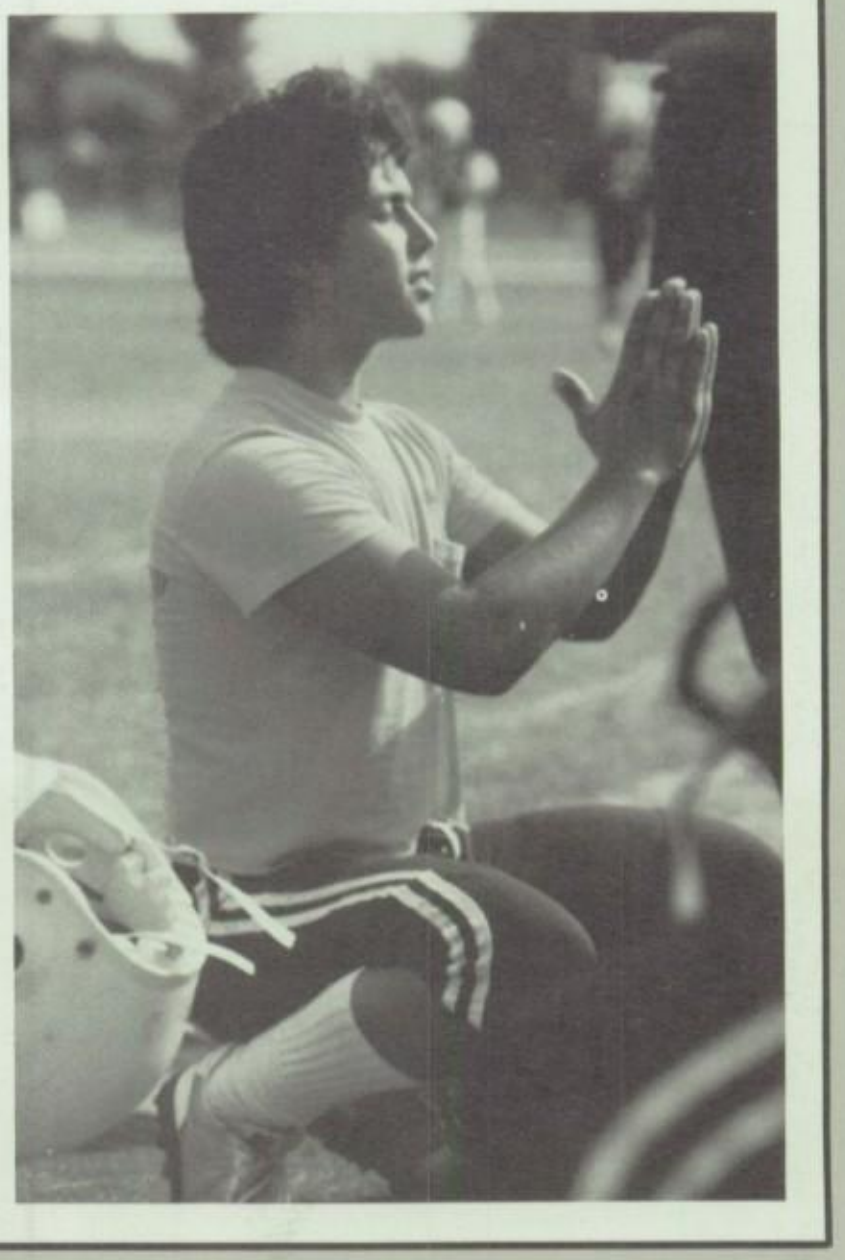
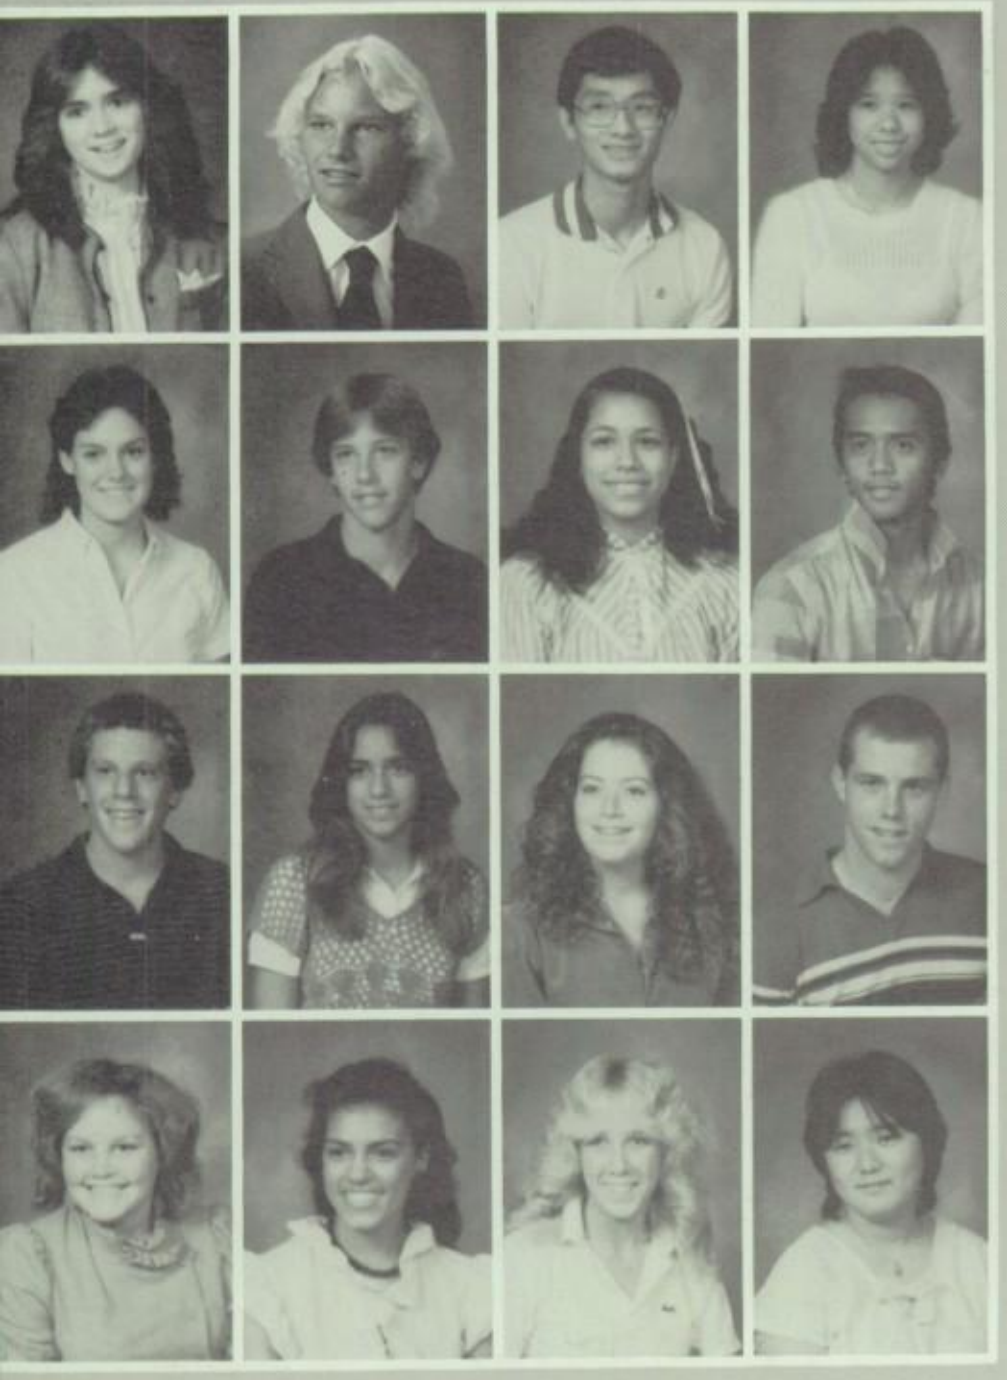
The San Diego Clippers aren't exactly America's basketball team, and so most of the students at Madison probably do not follow the team too closely. But to be sure, there are at least four students that do. They are: Bruce Adams, David Finley, Steve Kreger, and Todd Lantz. They are also ball-boys for the Clippers.

Their job is not the usual, and they don't receive a set salary, but with the extras — tickets, shoes, T-shirts — the information obtained from the players and the general experience of being involved with an NBA basketball team, it was well worth the time.

Todd plays basketball and says that," I am able to get many helpful tips from the players". Bruce, David and Steve say that they are learning how an organization is run, and that it will be helpful to them in the future. The Clippers may not be participating in the NBA Championship Series too soon, but their ball-boys prosper even as they continue to lose.



Hector Rodriguez prays diligently for a Warhawk victory against the tough opponent, Patrick Henry.



The Girl You Didn't Know

This cheerleader didn't know anything about cheerleading. In fact, she had never even seen a cheer or a cheerleader, until she went to the JV cheerleading try outs in the spring of 82. With her years of experience in gymnastics, she astonished all the varsity cheerleaders with her talent, and made the JV squad easily. She was 5'6" tall, had blonde hair, blue eyes and a smile from one ear to the other. She was not typical blonde cheerleader who was dingy and dumb, but a serious Christian girl who was shy and humble. Her name is Michele Seton Burner.

Michele was the most athletic in her whole family during High School, and when she wasn't doing homework she could be seen surfing at La Jolla, running, or riding a bike around town, singing in ensemble or church, practicing cheers with Judy Flor at a neighborhood park or as she stated, "Just taking advantage of all the opportunities that came my way." She also said, "I love people and sharing with them the happiness God has given."

Mimi, as her close friends called her, enjoyed Madison immensely. "Most of all," she added, "I like the tremendous variety of people and personalities. The people are fun, and without them school would not be too exciting." Michele thought having three real close friends like cheerleaders, Judy Flor, Eileen Velasco, and Karen Litz, who has a smile just like Michele was three times as good as having one best friend. "The three of them, have made my year at Madison a lot of fun and a time to remember!"

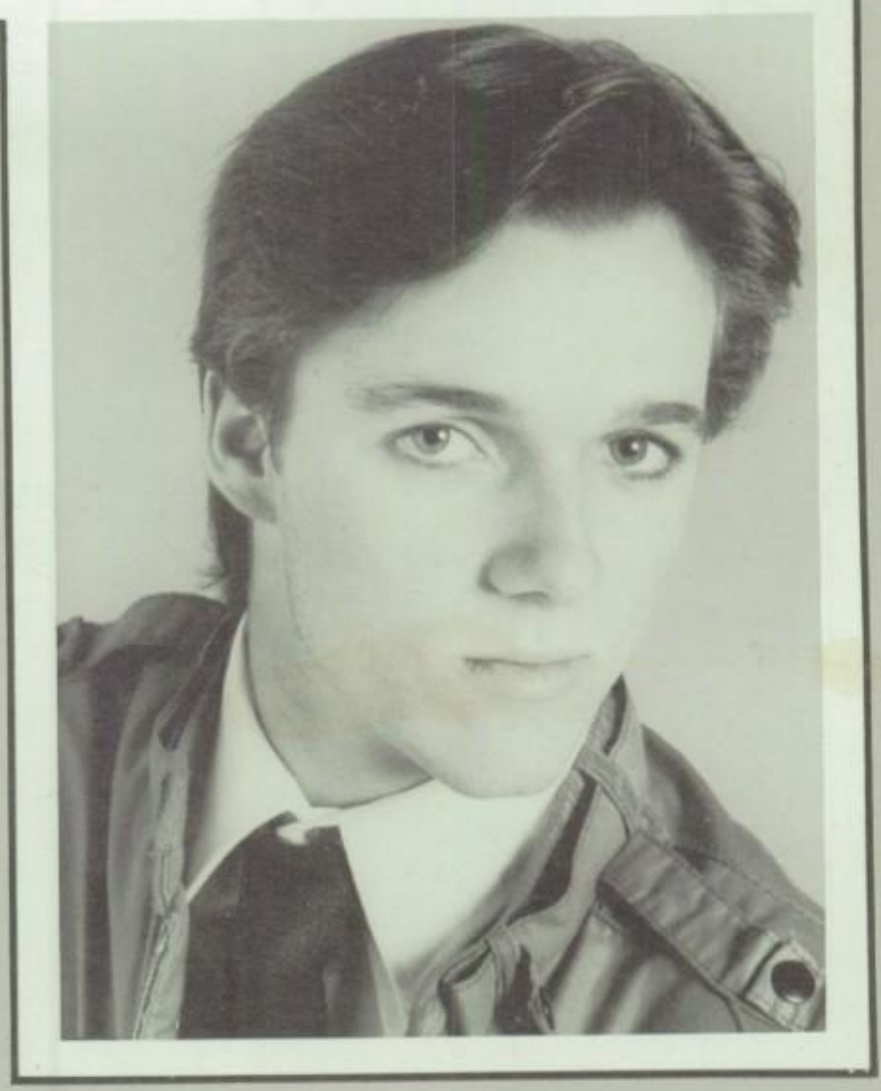
Doug Witcher was a senior at the age of seventeen when he started modeling. He saw an ad in the paper that said "We need new faces for placement in modeling." The ad was for New York West on Clairmount Mesa Blvd. Doug called them up and New York West set Doug up for his first interview. The next day he visited an agent for an interview. He signed an application at the interview. One of the agents asked him some questions about himself like: Had he had experience? Had he been with other agencies? The agent was pleased with his attitude so they called him back the next day to set him up with a photographic interview.

They took twenty pictures and sent them to the Newport Beach corporate office, while they decided if he was qualified for modeling. A week and a half went by and the pictures came back. The agent told him the news that he was accepted to be a model. His agent requested that he get into a professional training course. He needed experience in professional modeling. His parents were proud and supported him with money for the course. It cost $850.00 for an eight weeks course. The course was fully tax-deductable.

His first week in the course began on Monday. The classes ran from six o'clock until eight o'clock. The teacher went over the types of outfits to wear for the next photo session. Also he learned the movements and head angles to be practiced for the following week. On Tuesday he was taught skin care and application of make-up by a professional cosmetologist. On Wednesday he had a photo session which consisted of modeling different types of clothing. The class dressed in casual wear, sports wear, formal wear. They also studied products and character. Product and character is when he chooses a product to advertise. Character consists of assuming a character for instance, being a skier in the snow, or a tennis player dressed in tennis shoes with a racket and ball. In his last week of the course he was taught all the aspects of the business part of modeling. This refers to presenting himself and looking professional, whenever auditioning for a job.



Modeling is a profession that Doug Witcher finds rewarding.

A Shortcut Through College

How would you like to complete over a year of college while still in high school? Well, since the early 1950's this has been happening every year thanks to AP, or the Advanced Placement Program. AP is a program of college level courses and exams for high school students. Maybe you've been in an AP course without knowing it. Anyone is elegible to take an AP exam, however, those who have or were currently taking an AP course would be better prepared. The three hour exams were being offered in: English, American History, European History, Biology, Music, Spanish, and a new test which just recently became available on the subject of Computer Science, for all of the home computer "buffs"

To explain how all of this would work, here is an example. Say a student took Advanced World History this past year, near the end of the year, in May, they may take the AP test in European History. (European History would be the closest thing to World History). Now, providing he did well, he could receive up to a year of credit in the area in which he took the exam.

Among her responsibilities, Dr. Anne Hirt has the job of coordinating the AP program, and administering the tests. She says that last year, out of the aproximate 270 people who were in the AP program, only 26 of them took the tests. "Even though the exams are becoming more and more popular, there still are many people who are not aware of them". Says Dr. Hirt, who is really trying to promote the exams.

Any students who will be at Madison next year and are planning to go on to college, should be sure to look into the Advanced Placement Program.

There they were sitting in their lawn chairs, talking, and drinking Cokes, and waiting . . and waiting . . . and waiting. They didn't seem to mind waiting, in fact they were quite happy. Who were these people and what were they waiting for? They were true, diehard Star Wars fans, waiting in line for the highlight of the Star Wars saga, Return of the Jedi. It was the third movie of this series of films. Return of the Jedi was the movie that wrapped up the story, and explained unanswered questions.

There's no question that special effects played a big part in the appeal of George Lucas' series of Star Wars films. "There have been a lot of directors and studios who have been misled by the success of Star Wars into thinking that special effects are everything. They're not. Special effects have their place-and a very special place- in the Star Wars saga. But first and foremost comes the story," said Richard Marquand, director of Return of the Jedi. The special effects in Star Wars, The Empire Strikes Back, and Return of the Jedi, are phenomenal, but it was also the story that kept people coming back to the theaters, which resulted in making the three films the biggest moneymakers in movie history, along side of E.T., and Gone with the Wind.

The popularity of these films did have draw backs. A large security force was developed and a large fence built to keep fans and onlookers away from the set when Return of the Jedi was being filmed in the deserts of Yuma, Arizona. In fact there were so many fans (35,000 to be exact) that the movie had to be disguised as a horror movie called Blue Harvest, to throw off fans from thinking Return of the Jedi was being filmed. T-shirts and caps of the movie crew even read Blue Harvest.

George Lucas' story of good versus evil will always burn bright in our memory, not because the idea of the story of good versus evil was original or new. We always knew who would win, so why did the Star Wars saga appeal to us? Probably for the same reason Cinderella did, because we like to see people win, and feel they really do ride off into the sunset, or maybe because we liked to think there really was something out there . . . the force. It was a story about man's willingness to persevere, survive, and move forward. It was a story that has finally come to an end . . . or has it?

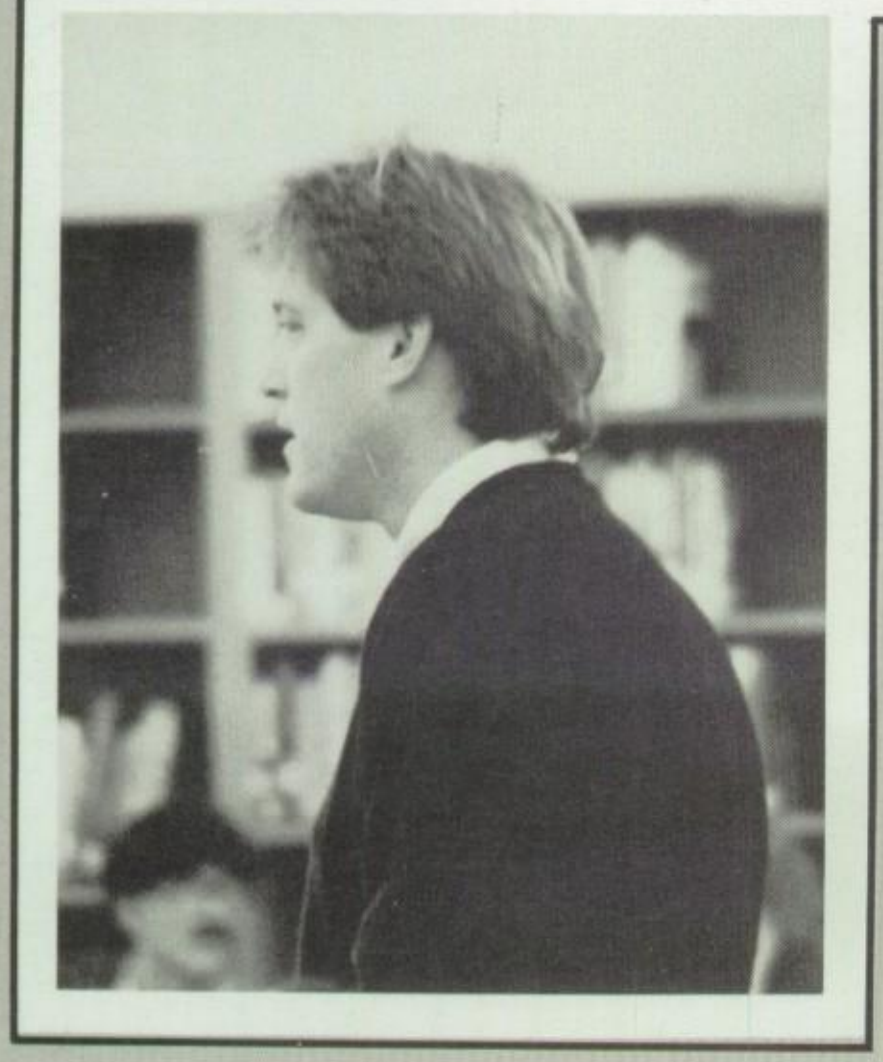
A group of seniors flock to the shade to enjoy their lunch.

Journalist, political commentator and son of former President Gerald Ford; Jack Ford gave a revealing interview to Madison leaders and aspiring journalists in the Madison library on November 22, 1983. Ford talked on a variety of subjects ranging from the position taken by the press, to Queen Elizabeth, to the filming of Pandas in China.

Jack Ford believes that the freedom of the press is essential to the country but he throughly dislikes the "holier than thou" attitude held by the media. He says the media feigns impartiality to get their point across to the public; as in the case of ABC's The Day After. He also believes that public perception can be swayed by programs which hide behind constitutional laws and only give one side to a controversial issue. The media has no checks or balances since no one has a voice to the people except the media. Jack Ford's advice was, "Have a healthy skepticism of people who say they are totally impartial because it's probably the opposite."

Ford not only spoke about the media but told students about his experiences while in the White House. When asked who the most interesting person he ever met was he immediatly said, "My dad is the most interesting and best person I have ever met." Then he went on to tell about the other people he was really impressed by: Queen Elizabeth, Breshnev, and King Hussein of Jordon; King Hussein being the most charismatic person he had ever met. His many encounters with foreign people made him realize that they are people too but that different countries have different perspectives on certain issues. For example, he stated, he found that the Russians are people just like us and that they want peace as much as we but only use different methods to obtain such peace. The Russians have been invaded many times, he stated, and our land has been invaded only once. He says this is important to realize in the way they react to situations.

Jack Ford is truely a very interesting, intelligent, and certainly understanding individual. He has experienced many things in his life and they have aided him in expanding his awareness of others. So it definitly was an enlightening day when Jack Ford came to our campus.



Speaking in the Madison Library, Jack Ford fascinates his audience with comments on politics and Journalism.

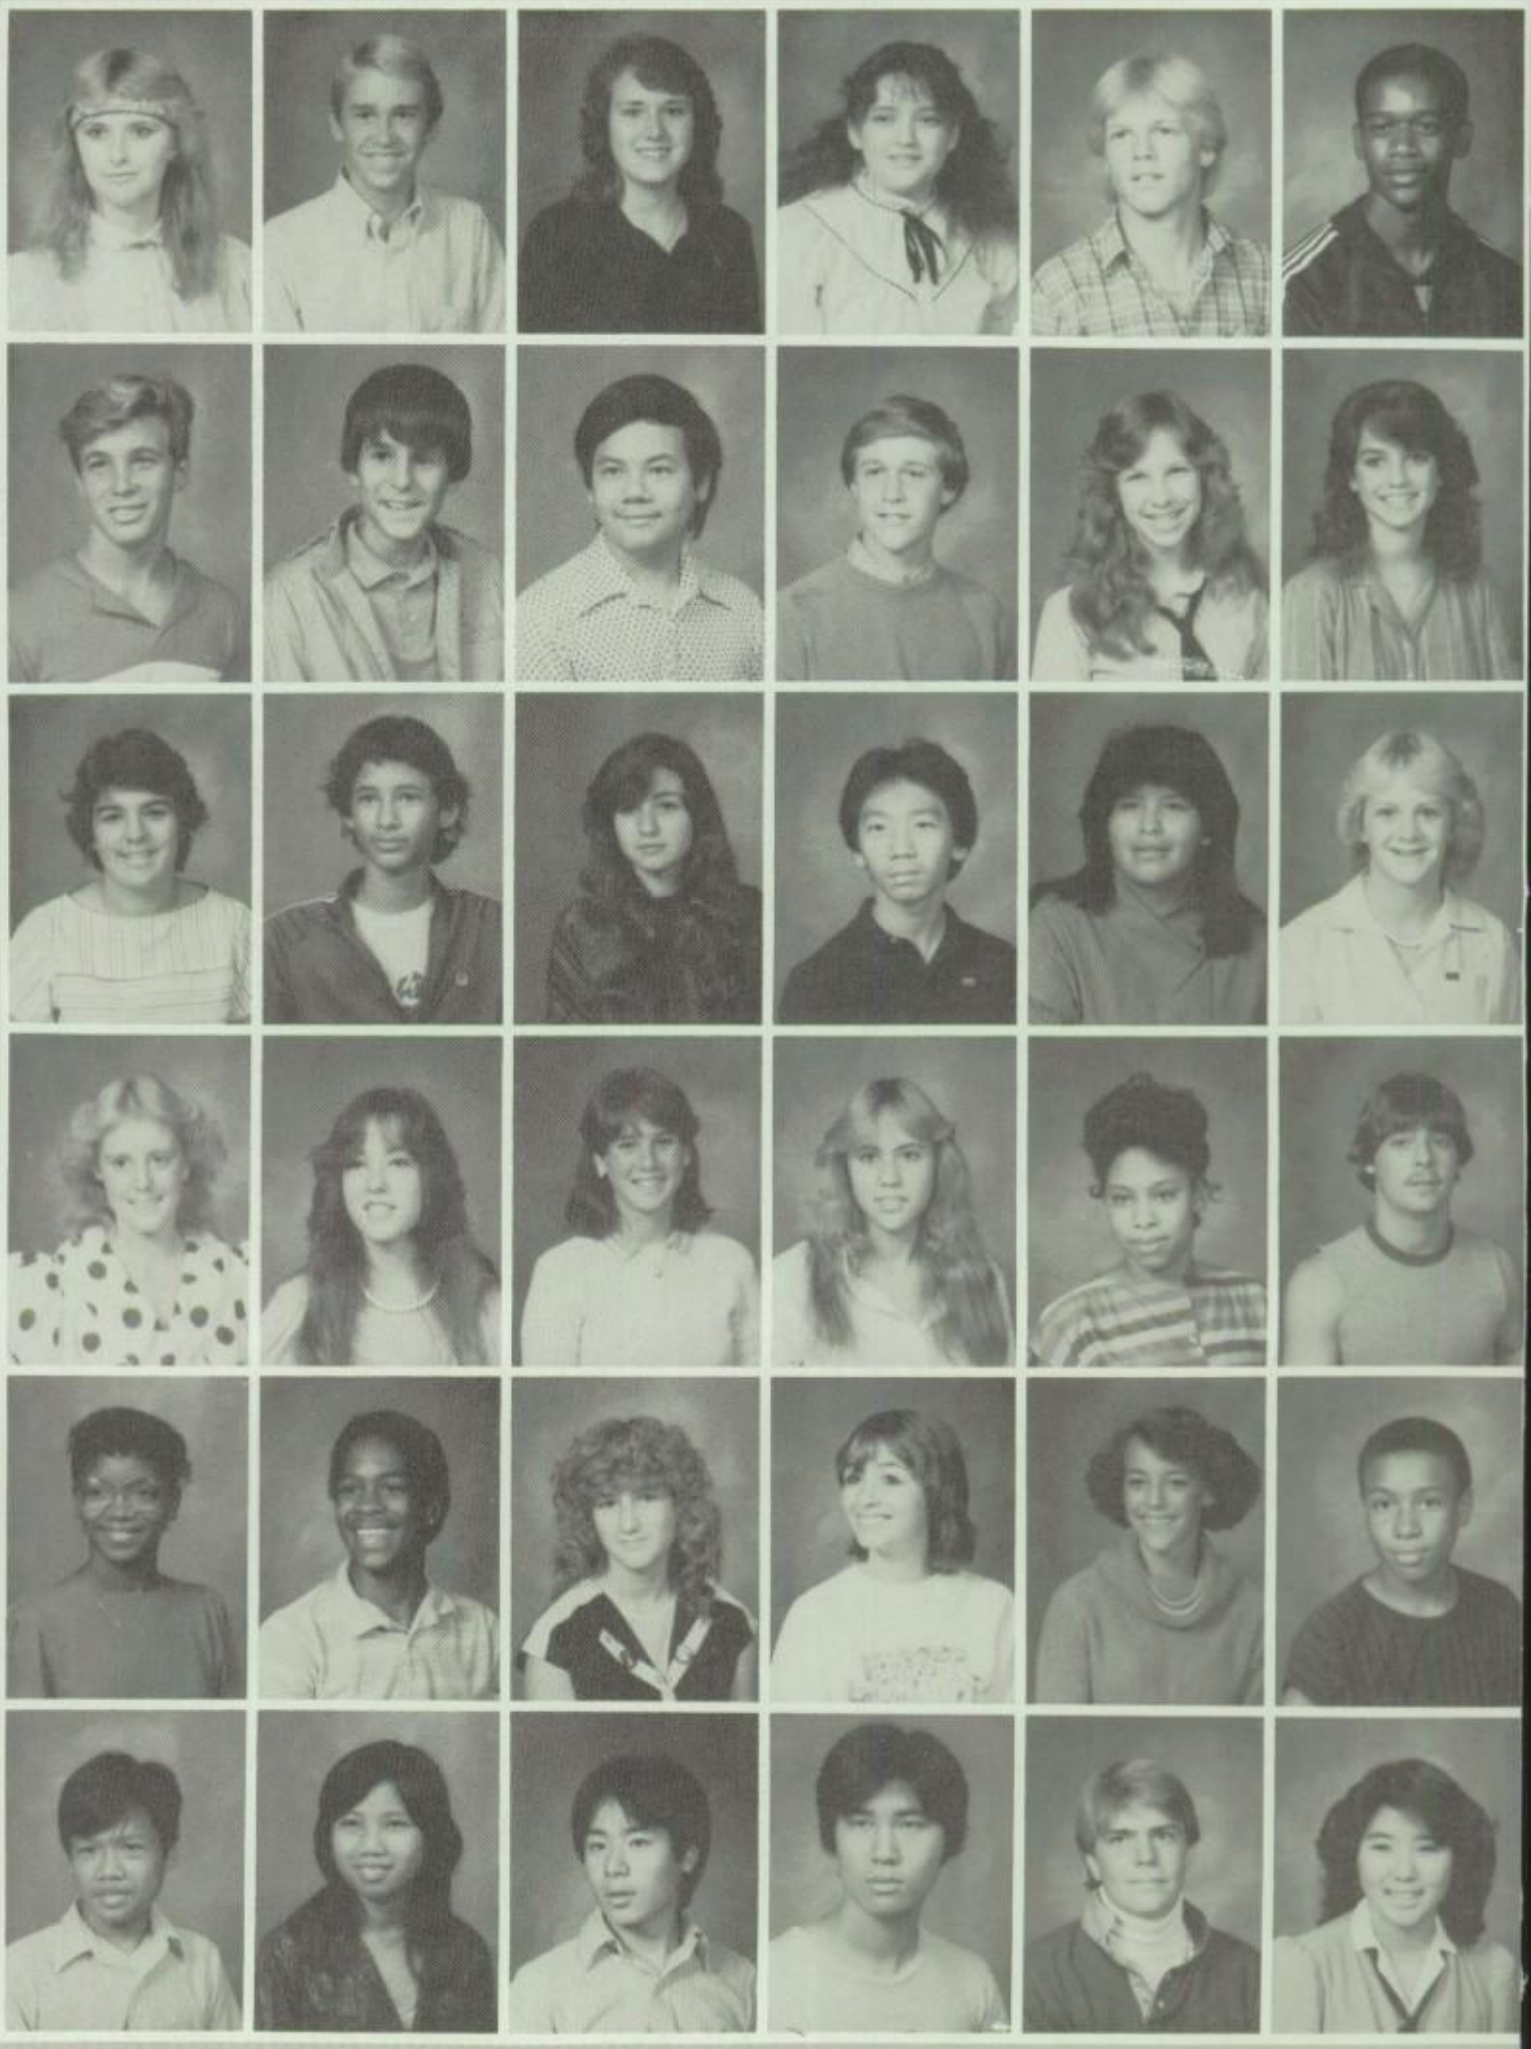
Foiled Again!



First introduced as a sport on a small scale in the 14th century, fencing has grown considerably in popularity. It offers the opportunity for concentrated physical exercise regardless of the weather.

Although it is quite an old sport in the European countries, it is fairly new here at Madison. Madison has always offered fencing as an elective P.E. class, but this year the sport has spawned a brand new club. "We hope that fencing will become more popular in the years to come," commented Anne Rosser, the person behind the new club.

The Fencing Club consisted of about thirteen students who met Tuesday and Thursday at lunch in the dance room to practice their various stances. The members of the club enjoyed working out with each other, and began laying plans for various competitions.

Besides Madison, Patrick Henry is the only other school in the district that has a fencing club. The sport has not become interscholastic at this time, but the members hope that, in the years to come, it will. In the meantime, the members of the Fencing Club will keep practicing, sharpen their skills and - keep on jousting.

Project Succeed began in the 1979-80 school year. It is an attendance motivation program whose primary targets are students with truancy problems. The process for Project Succeed is simple. The student picks up a daily class attendance card which is to be signed each class period by the teacher and returned to the Succeed office after sixth period. Project Succeed also tracks the attendance of new students to help their adjustment to the campus. Students are normally enrolled in the program for an eight week period by a referral from either the counselors, the attendance office, parents or the students themselves. The project is also correlated with the new tardy policies that were put into effect to keep as many students in class as possible. Project Succeed has had approximately seven hundred students participate in the program during the course of the year. In most cases, as the students attendance increases, the student generally finds it easier to do his work and he gains a healthier attitude toward himself and his school.

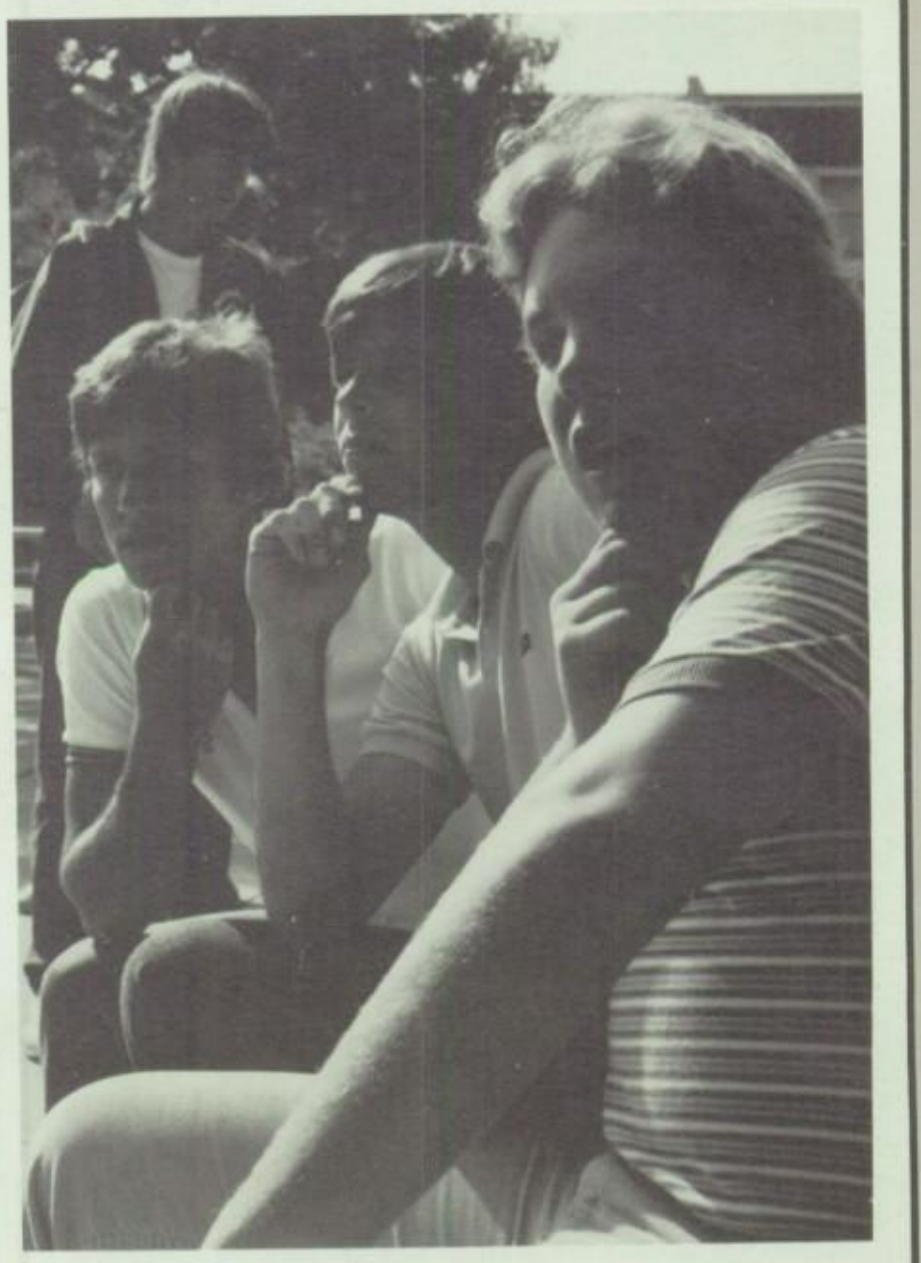
Senior "Ditch Day" has been a tradition at Madison for a number of years. But for the class of '84 and seniors there after, this tradition seems to be in trouble.

"Ditch Day" is not approved by the Board of Education, and such a day is illegal. In the past, ditch day was a day that was set aside to spend time with fellow seniors. Each could do what ever he enjoys most, whether it was going to a movie, shopping, or just having a get-together with special friends.

Maureen Zigrang, ASB Secretary, stated that the school administration was against ditch day because the school loses funds for every unexcused absence. The school also felt that unsupervised activities might result in injury. There are also some seniors who need that one day in class.

The administration put out the word. Any senior who had an unexcused absence on any ditch day would not be allowed to participate in the graduation ceremony, attend the senior prom, or participate in any other senior activities.

All traditions are not necessarily good traditions, and good or bad is a matter of a point of view. From our point of view it became apparent that "ditch day" was a tradition best honored in the breach than in the observance.



"Horrors!! No Senior Ditch Day?!!", shrieks Ingo Bentrott, while Keith Hall and Jim Hobbs ponder the subject.

TDD is a kind of machine for the deaf people to use to conection with the telephone. TDD (Telecommuncation Devices for the Deaf) is a machine used with a telephone to provide communcation for the deaf. It is like a small typewriter into which the telephone receiver is connected. It has a printout screen across the front on which typed messages appear. The telephone company provides TDDs to the Deaf community free of charge in California. Currently there are about ten different types of the TDDs.

TDD is used to help deaf people to communicate with each other. Hearing can contact deaf people, but they have to call a special service (DCS) Deaf community service in San Diego. DCS is a kind of "interpreter" on the phone. Obviously it takes longer to type than to talk on the phone. For this reason, Deaf people have been trying to obtain reduced phone rates, especially for long distance calls. Several states have, in fact, reduced phone rated for deaf people with TDD's.

Every phone customers has probably noticed that the telephone company charges them 5¢ a month for that service. The reason they charge each customer is because they need the money to get TDD's to provide for the deaf people. More and more, hospitals, police, and fire station, banks, travel agenices, airlines and consumer agenices, are also beginning to purchase and use TDDs.

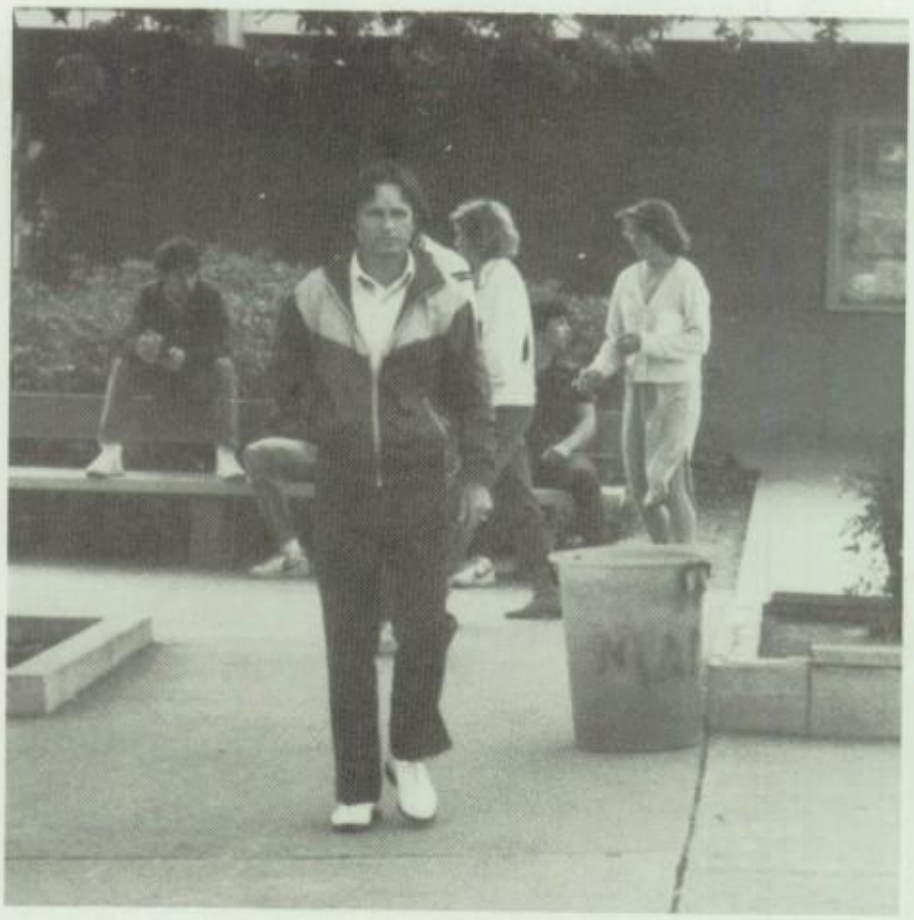
Faculty

The faculty section is generally the most neglected and incomplete section in a yearbook. It consists of boring layouts, weak captions, and a lack of in-depth coverage. This has been the case in the Madison Prospectus over the past several years.

We have made a novel attempt at improving the faculty section by using creativity in designing layouts, writing complete captions, and by adding articles on staff members.

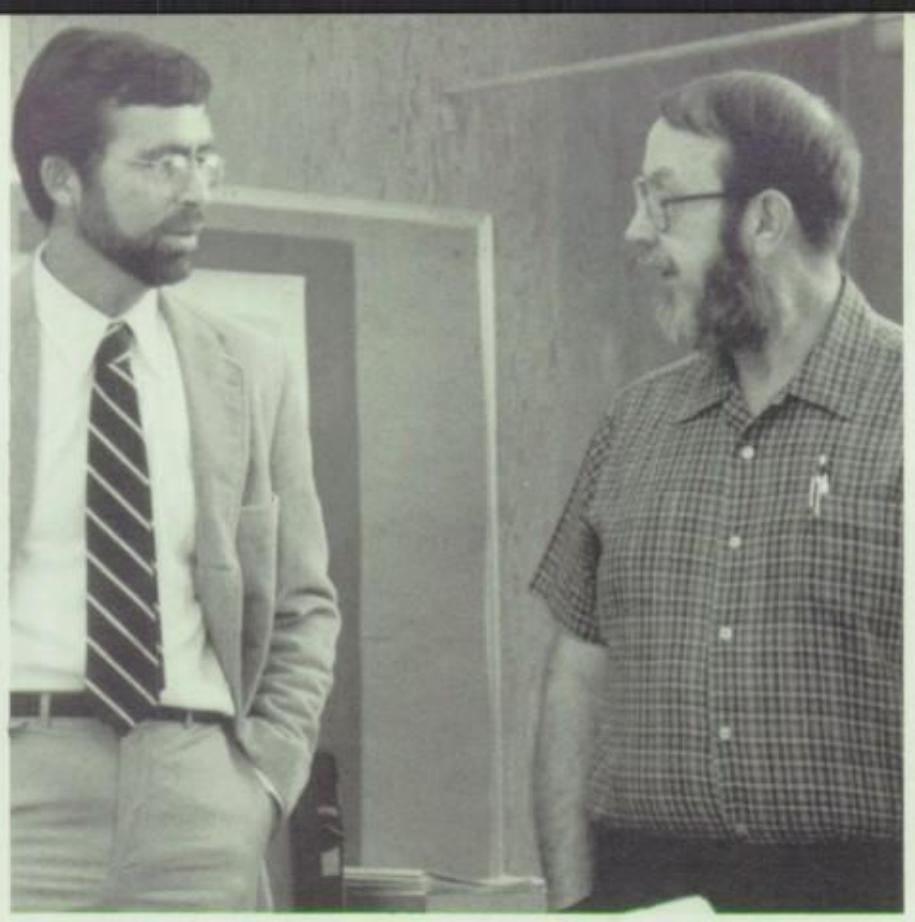
There is still room for improvement; perfection cannot be achieved in only one year. We hope that our initiative in improving this section will start a trend of better faculty coverage in the future — there has to be more interesting information about the faculty than their department and room number.



Walking through the lunch court is Fred Brown. Most students know Fred. He is involved in Math, tutoring, and athletics.

Bill Moore sits in the custodial golf cart. He is the Head Custodian and is responsible for keeping Madison in order.

Mr. Fink escapes from his testing and counseling duties in search of a cup of coffee.



James Mugg lectures to his American Government class. He also teaches eleventh grade History.

"All right guys, get back to class." Bob Bishop uses intimidation to keep students from skipping class.

"All righree", Ms. Connell directs students to the next task.

Strive For Excellence

"My philosophy is to push people a little harder, set the goal a little higher, so you have to reach for it instead of merely bumping your head against the ceiling a little bit lower" Remarked the San Diego City Schools Superintendent, Dr. Thomas W. Payzant. Payzant came from Oklahoma City in November of 1982 to take up his fourth superintendency.

Harvard educated Payzant has initiated many reforms including some personnel changes inside the Education Center. This of course meant stepping on some toes. "There has been some grumbling among some of the Senior Officers, partially due to the elimination of some of their friend's jobs. Now, however, what little noise there might have been, has considerably settled down," stated an unidentified employee of the City Schools. More important, however, are the new policies which Payzant has instated. By now you are probably familiar with the homework policy which requires two hours of homework be issued daily. There also has been a 2.0 minimum grade point average (GPA) placed on all extra-curricular activities including athletics. As far as feedback from parents has been going, Payzant said, "There has been a very high degree of support (among the community), for the homework policy, the extended reading practice, and basically the general focus on the academic aspects of school. It certainly has not been unanimous by any means, but the reactions have generally been quite favorable."

With all of the emphasis our new Superintendent has been placing on academic achievement, it might be interesting to know what caused Mr. Payzant to make those sudden, sweeping reforms. Of course, the general consensus in the community lets him know how the people are feeling, but Payzant also traces some of his ideas back to his own basic beliefs in education and his own very positive experience he had while working towards a degree in college (Phd. in Education Administration). Payzant seemed to do quite well in high school with a B+ average. In college, he got off to a slow start with a 2.5 average in his first two years. "I guess I'd be called a late bloomer in some respects", said Payzant.

Mr. Payzant was asked if he had anything he wanted to say to the students at Madison. So, he leaves us with this message. "First of all, I am very impressed with what I see in our students. I see a great deal of talent out there. But the thing that disturbs me most, is when students don't fulfill their own potential or develop their own talent . . . the interest, the ability, are all out there, in your generation. It's just a question of you learning how to push yourselves a little bit more, and your parents becoming more positive role models."

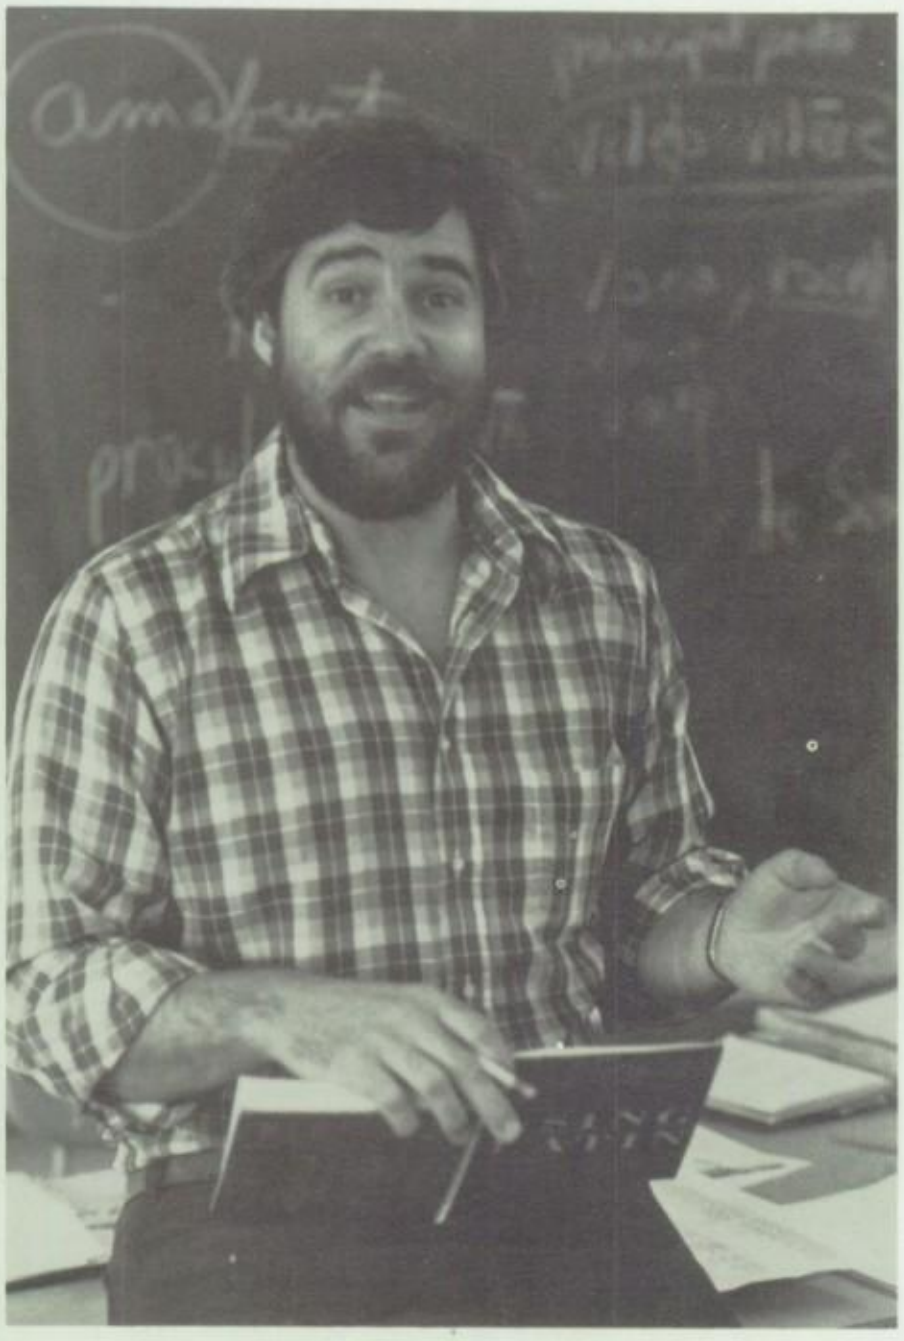
A Multi-talented Man

Mr. Jim Robinson, or J.R. as he's known to his students, began his teaching career here at Madison eighteen years ago. He comes from a long line of teachers in his family. He says he was first unsure about teaching, but once he entered the classroom and began working with kids, he knew that he had definitely made the right decision.

Some of Mr. Robinson's philosphies on teaching may differ from those of other teachers because he tries to get his students to do things without using any threats or scare tactics. He feels that they average out to an approximate fifty-fifty pay off. In the words of Mr. Robinson, "the sine qua non of teaching is liking your pupils, and having them like you. It's the most important of all."

Starring in the fall production of Dino has significantly changed Mr. Robinson for the better. He believes that it has given him greater self-discipline. He states that it was a hard, scary, and wonderful experience that was more demanding than teaching itself. Mr. Robinson recalls his most unforgettable experience as a teacher as being in 1969 at the original Roman Banquet. This was where the Latin Club, and their fearless leader, spent time raising, butchering, and barbequing a one-hundred pound pig!

When he's not teaching, Mr. Robinson enjoys reading, listening to music, being with friends and family, eating, and running. He is a lover of music, and enjoys collecting and taping live broadcasts of opera companies and symphony orchestras. Anyone who has met Mr. Robinson will certainly agree that we should all be thankful that he walked into the classroom eighteen years ago.



Career Counselor, Michael Haliahan

Madison's only Latin scholar, Jim Robinson is making the transition to acting.

Raleigh Rallies Madison

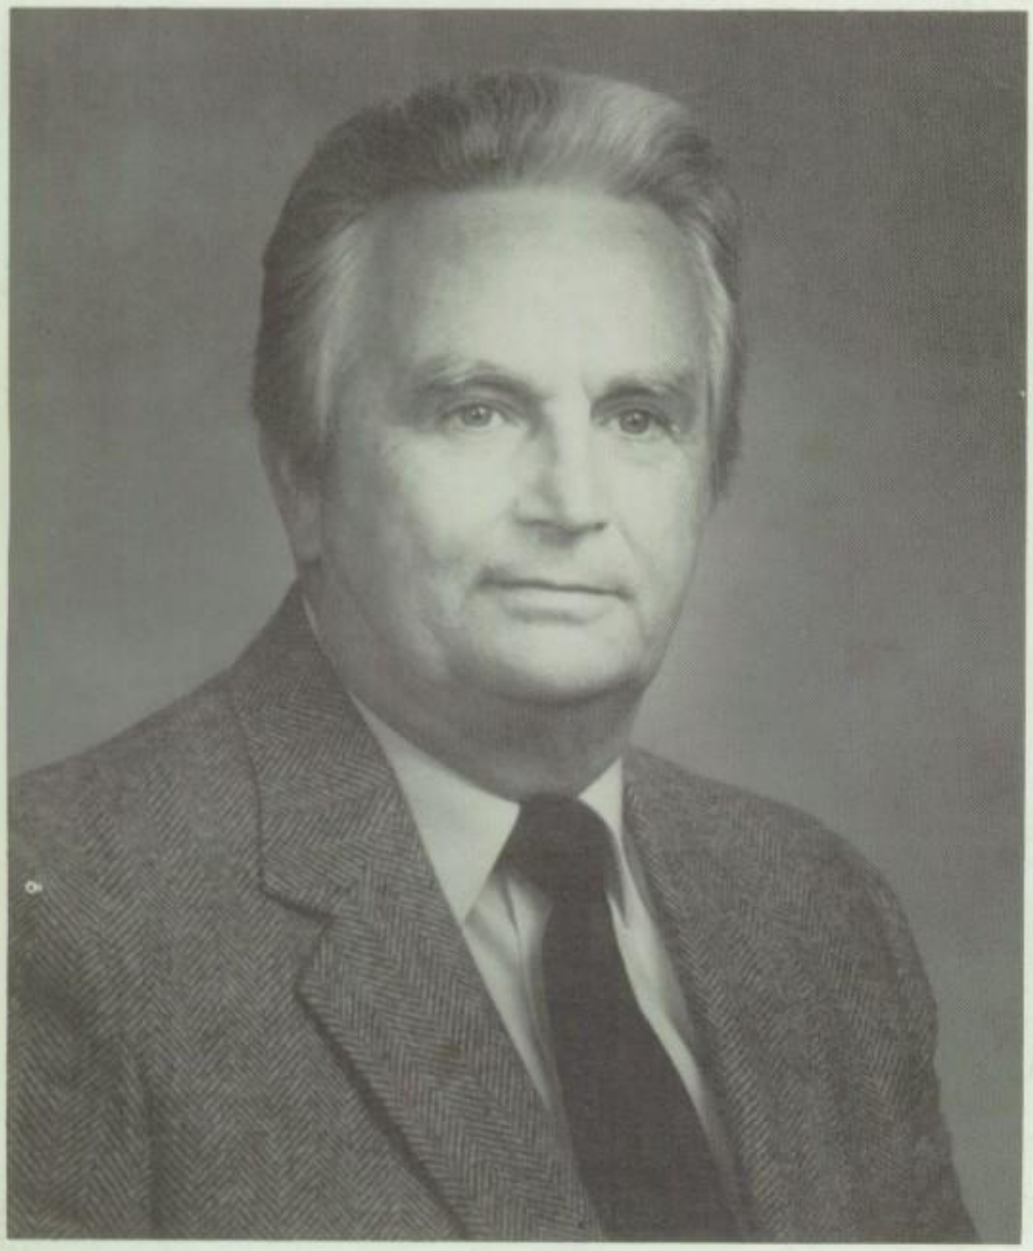
The staff and students here at Madison were very proud to welcome Mr. Chuck Raleigh to our school as our new Principal.

Mr. Raleigh began his career as a teacher. He was a counselor and coach at Lincoln High for ten years, he then worked as a Vice Principal at Gompers. He continued to move on and he became a Vice Principal at Hale Junior High, where he worked for three years. He went to Crawford High, for three years, once again as Vice Principal. He worked at Twain, for four years, as a principal. Before coming to Madison he was the Principal at Clairmont High school. This year, we are happy to welcome him to Madison.

Mr. Raleigh has helped our staff and students throughout this school year, by improving student behavior as well as attendance.

Mr. Raleigh is an extremely busy man. Away from his job, he likes to go to the horse races. He also has a large family with two boys, two girls, and two grandchildren, although he states, "I only have one wife."

Many of us don't realize what an extremely difficult job it is to be a principal of a school. A principal is in charge of the entire school, staff and students. Mr. Raleigh has not just shuffled papers, he has supported all of our activities, P.T.A., and has benefitted each of us in a special way.



In his first year at Madison, Chuck Raleigh initiated new policies and got involved in student activities.

Bill Swain shows he can relate to the students.

Generally Overlooked

These people rarely receive acclaim. They are essential people, but are generally overlooked. They are the secretaries, the cafeteria workers and other important people. We wish to commend their work and say "thank you" for all the teachers and students that their services helped during this school year. They have done an excellent job, and will continue to do so.

Varied Interests . . . Varied Schedule

Another teacher we aquired was Miss Joanna Sands. She taught evening classes here at Madison when we had an evening school. She has 15 years experience in Junior and Senior high.

Miss Sands had an interesting schedule, she is a homemaking teacher who taught clothing, food, child development and American Government all in one year.

She has business experience and is widely traveled. She enjoys working with the students and feels she can bring this experience into the classroom. One of her main goals is to be a counselor. She loves to read, and comments, "Reading is knowledge." She also loves snowskiing, traveling, cooking, sewing, gardening, and Mrs. Field's chocolate chip cookies.

Joanna Sands whips up a lesson for her food class as she tries to decide how to use it for American Government.

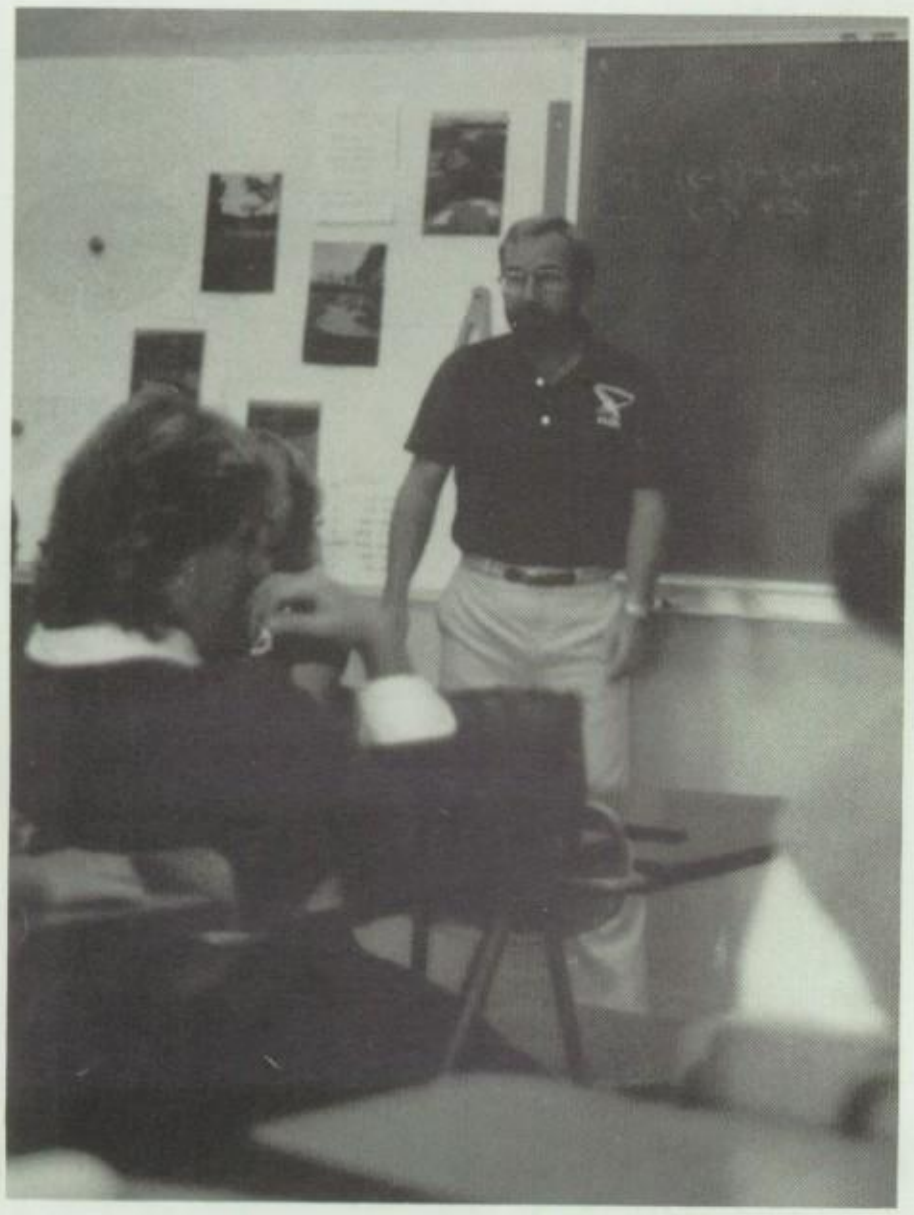
Trying to resolve problems in the baseball budget are George Mangusing and coach, Bob Roeder.

Office Change Aids Madison

An addition to our staff, this year, was Ms. Jan Lepowsky. Ms. Lepowsky is the General Secretary here at Madison. She was in charge of our daily bulletin, along with her many other duties.

Ms. Lepowsky came to us from Hale Junior High where she worked for eight years. She was not looking for a job, until Mr. Raleigh invited her to join Madison's staff. She said, "It was an offer that I could not refuse." She likes all of Madison's staff as well as the students, and she is very happy that she made the change.

In her spare time she enjoys playing tennis, reading and working out, although her favorite activity is bowling. She loves to travel and meet many different types of people. She is a very outgoing person, which definitely made her an asset to our school's staff.



Math Department Chairman, Bill Wible, tries to find a commmon denominator.

Encouragement comes from the sidelines as Coach, Bob Bishop, and defensive Coach Schuler watch the team's performance.

"My Hobby Is People"

Mr. Donald Omsted started as many of us did, as a surfing bum worried about being there for "the big wave," but he realized that we all must have a purpose in life. He realized while spending his time at the beach, and then going to San Diego State for his degree, that he liked people. In fact his remark was, "My hobby is people".

He found his interest was in science and biology and started his teaching career as a science and biology teacher at Einstein Junior High, where he spent 16 years. Mr. Omsted feels that teaching is a constant learning process. In fact he states "If I stop learning from teaching I'll quit!"

Mr. Omsted feels he can understand the student's problems because in his learning experiences he found areas where he felt he didn't fit in. One such experience was his time spent in the Army, but he also learned a lot about people and society there. He feels that his students need a sense of belonging which enables them to learn easier.

His first impression of Madison students is that they lack school spirit and pride. He would like to see this changed to where all the students would hold their head up with pride for their school and the educational opportunities it offers. "We hope we can all have this pride", he concluded.

"Lord, help me through one more day." says Coach Bishop.

"... that's with pepperoni and cheese!" says Bob Ganger, District Counselor, during a break in his busy schedule.

Prospectus Thanks The Faculty

The faculty is commended for their tolerance when Yearbook activities infringe upon their teaching time. Putting together a book of this nature is a splendid creative effort, but it is also a lot of work. The material that needs to be accumulated can not always be acquired during period five. Don't dwell upon the times the staff has wandered from 301, but look instead at the writing, the photography, and the interesting layouts that make Madison's Yearbook consistently outstanding.

Teachers tend to be isolated from each other, are extremely busy trying to cope with large classes, and find themselves spending a disproportionate amount of time on students who have difficulty succeeding. Our Yearbook is a tribute to the students with the talent to create a history of the year, and to the many students who participate in a wide range of creative activities here at Madison High School.

Bill Penn- Advisor

To be this happy it must be lunch time for Bob Newton and Keith Stephens.

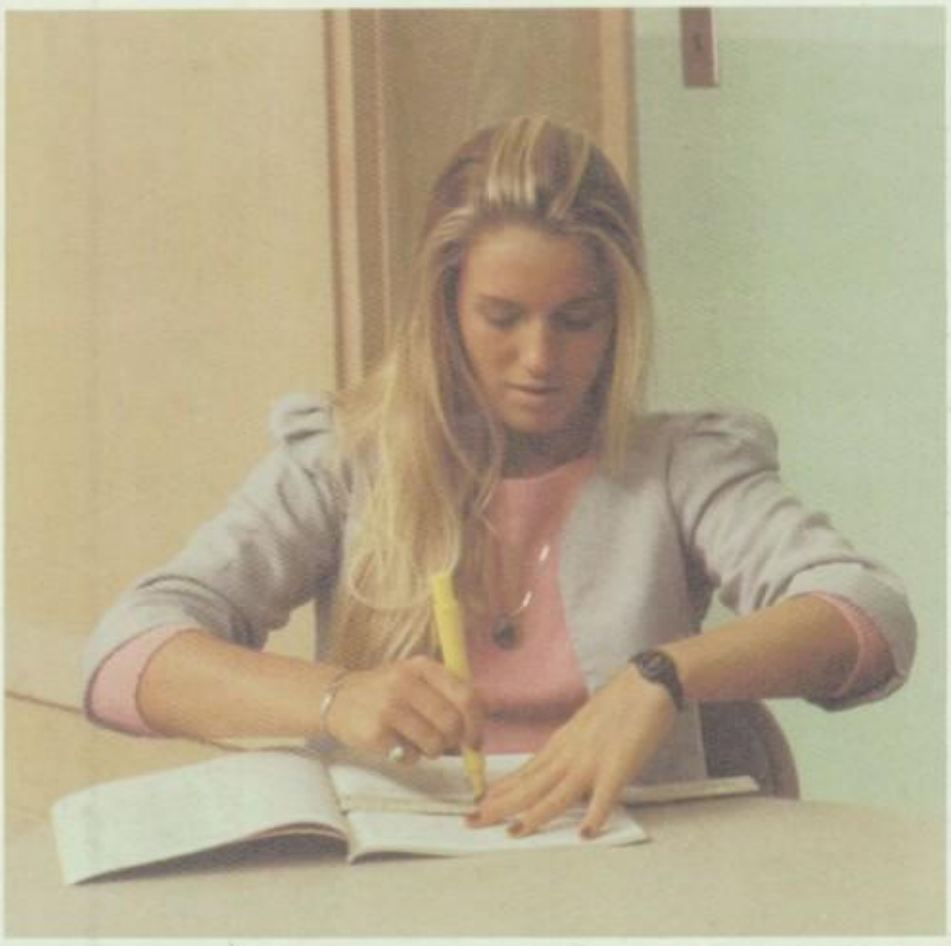
Football games were one of the most popular activities at Madison in 1983. Sheri Smith made sure to buy her ticket early and take advantage of the dollar discount offered with her ASB card.



Because of stricter homework policies, Patty Murphy tried to get some of her work done at school.

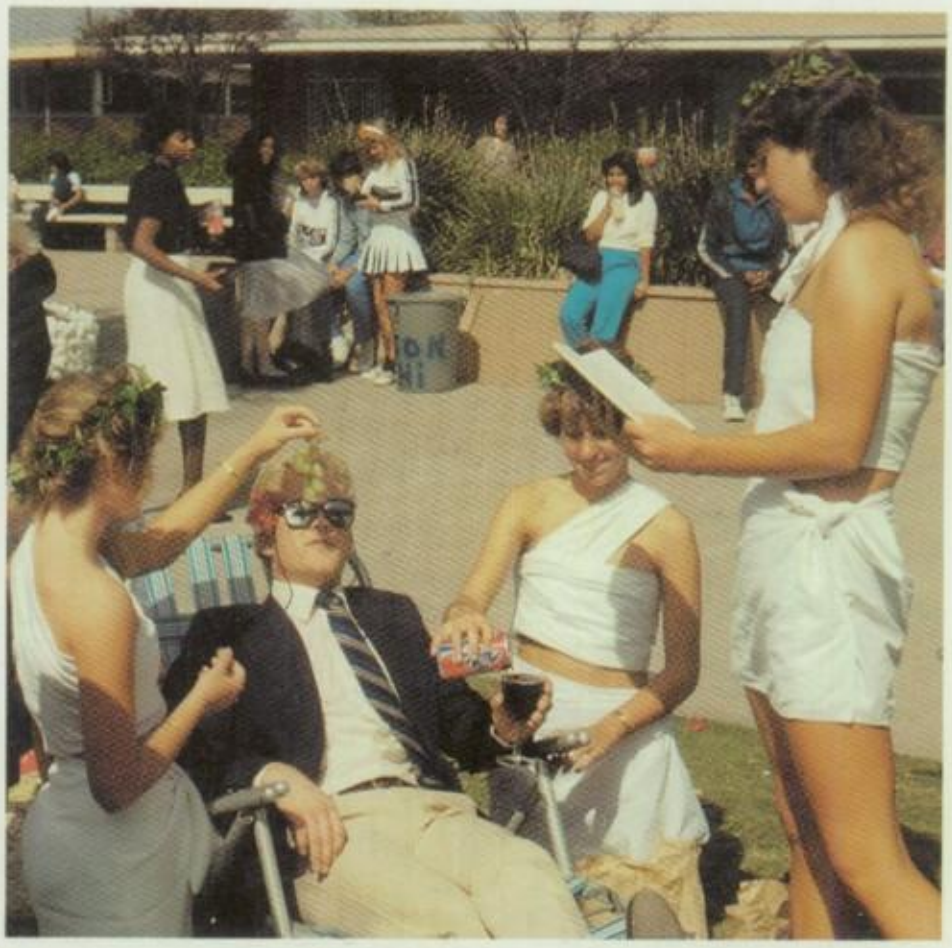
Smaller size plagued this year's drill team, but they still had enough members to spell out Madison.

The Year Begins To Fade

As the 1983-84 school year comes to an end, now is the time to look back, reminisce, and remember. Remember what? you ask. Well, remember the good times and the bad times; the time you forgot to study for a test and still got an A, or the time you studied for hours, but couldn't pass. Remember the dances, the football games and lunch with your friends. Remembering these things is something that you will do for years to come, but don't constantly remember the past; look to the future.

The future is important, because that is where you will be living for the rest of your life. As you have always heard, you cannot live in the past. If you are a sophomore, look forward to your remaining years in high school. They will be the best years of your life. A junior must begin to think about college, and if you decide not to go, you must make other plans. If you are a senior, you have already made a decision that will affect your life in some way.

For all of us, there are so many decisions. We hope the ones that we make are the correct ones for our individual selves. Only time can tell, and once that time has passed, we can look back, reminisce, and remember. Remember what? you ask. Well, remember our lives.



Whan that Aprill with his shoures soote . . . Joe Bower took in the good life as Cheri McMeekin read him Chaucer, Kristen VanParren Poured his drink, and Sheri Smith hand fed him grapes on Slave Day.

Every year there were changes in fad and fashion at Madison. Kim Schmidt, Debbie Moore, Tammy Surber and Michelle Moore displayed the so called Punker Look.

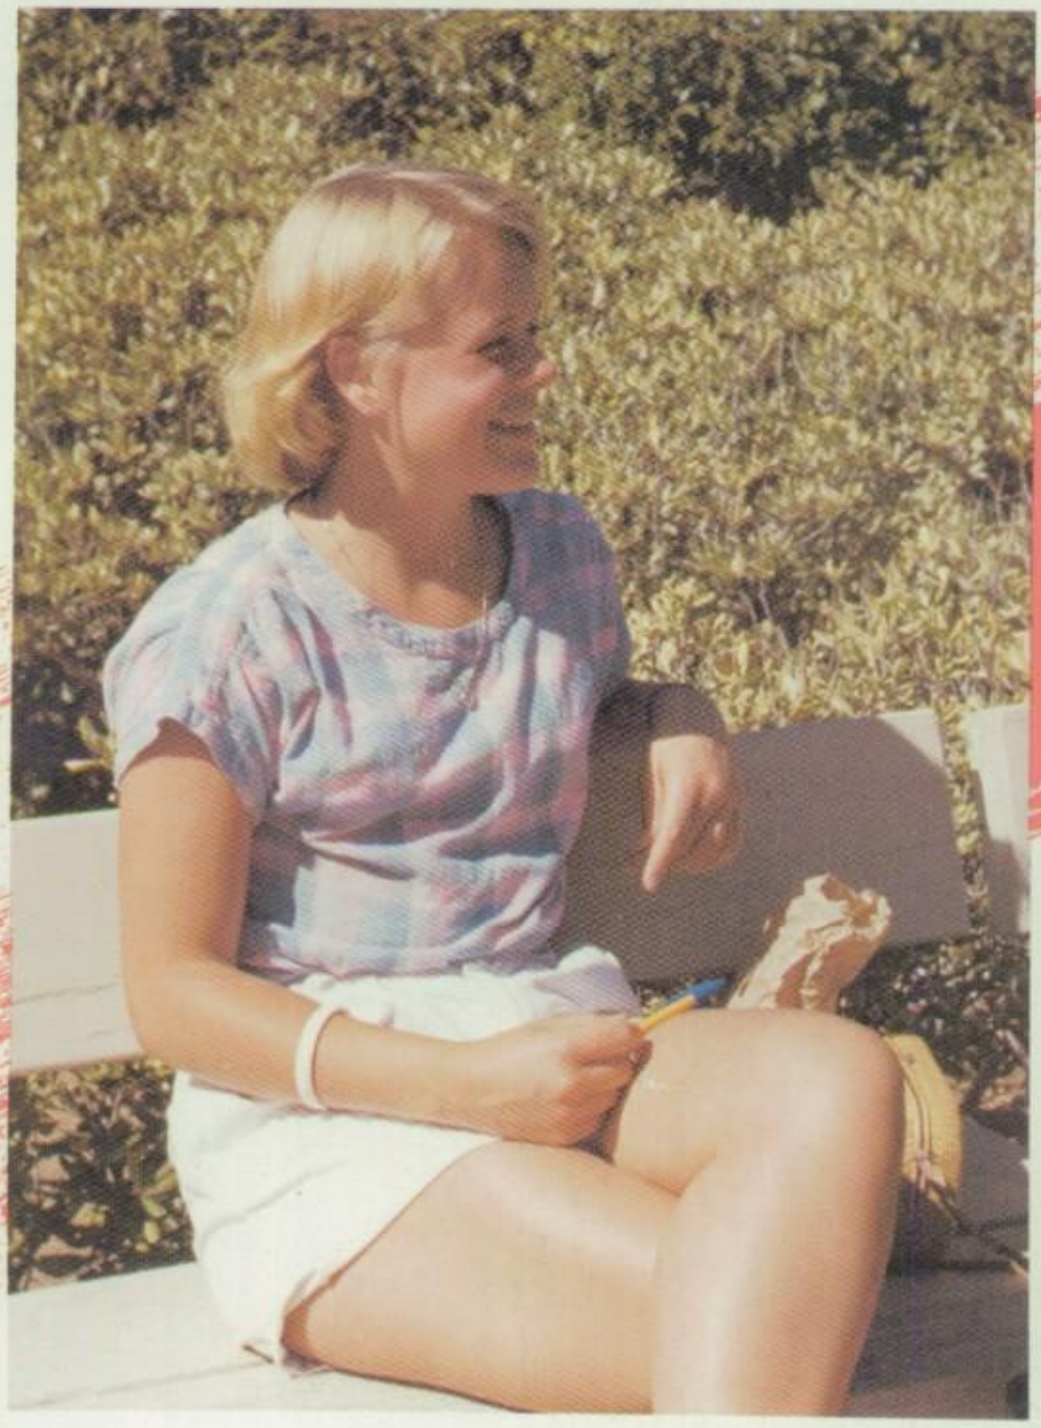
Many people contributed to keeping Madison clean. One was head custodian, Bill Moore.

The varsity cheerleaders were important in creating crowd enthusiasm at sports and activities.

Art is a large part of the 1983-84 Prospectus. It is a large part of many peoples lives. Here, an artist was seen painting the Arboretum in Balboa Park.

It was much easier to make it through the school year with a good friend. Louise Stevenson and Trisha Loftus made it through just fine.

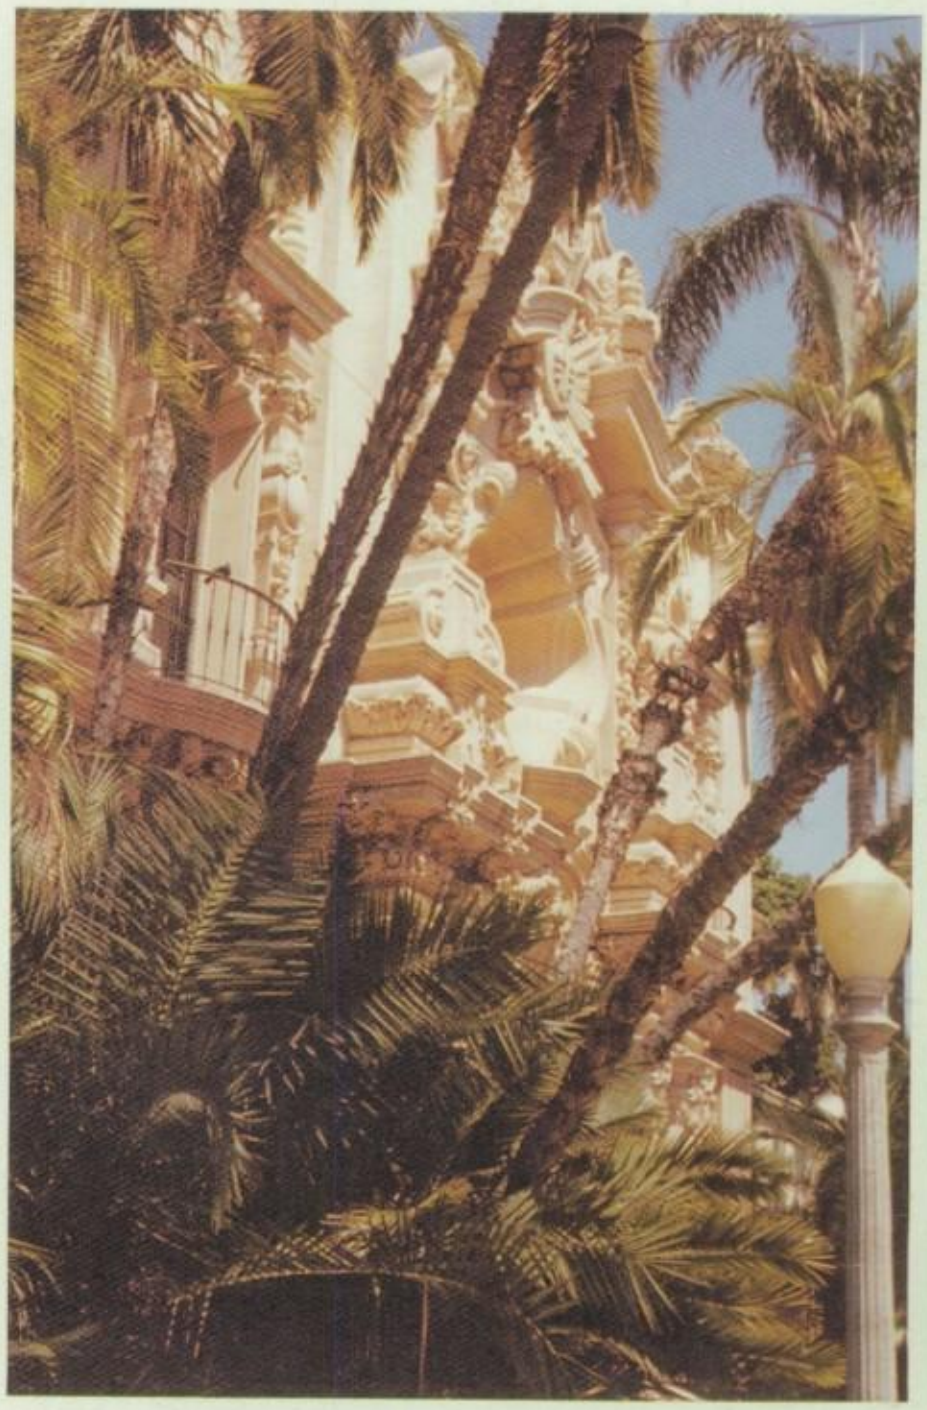
Everyone reacted differently to the camera. Some posed, some showed off, and some hid. Helena Nordman just turned her head and smiled.



Love in high school! Some people claim it impossible. John Stankowski and Lisa Grennon didn't seem to believe that.

Food and friendship, what else was need to make a day perfect. Tamara Neeley and Gloria Salas share a sunny bench.

Balboa Park is one of San Diego's most beautiful areas. Many of the park's beautiful buildings have been refurbished.



The administration cracked down on students out of class. Ben Lenley and Mckinley Williams kept an eye out for administration.

Pep rallies gave George Mangusing and Lloyd Dyson an opportunity to practice crowd control.

The sign board declared Madison number one, but lunch still came first.

RESEVIED FOR MY HEART (SWEET HEART)

Sharon,

there are no words to express the feeling that in my heart
I wish I could grant you all the things you wish, if I were
King I would make the stars your jewelry and every day sunny
I would never let trouble in ter your heart cause I will Be there!
for every time you need money I will Be your cash, and when you need times of romance I will Be your moon light.
I wish my life to preserve yours, All things in life should Be as good as you. Your just the right one for David Kennedy and I hope someday you will Be proud to carry my name and bare my children, I would like that more Than any thing else in the world, Because thats what you mean to me "the world". As long as you stay with me you will have no worryes with your career cause I will do my best to see you though. just never forget that I love you with all that I have and the reason for that is Because you treat me like no other, and for me there can only be you and no other. Your not a geek, spazy lady, or just a plain lady your a woman and your mines.

With love
David
Kennedy

In most yearbooks, this page is for the editor to tell you how rediously difficult it was to put the yearbook together. You are told of scattered layout sheets, stacks of unedited copy and the long hard hours involved in editing them. This is also a page the Madison Yearbook has not had in the past.

Although generally misused I felt this was a page the 1984 Prospectus needed. I do not, however, intend to tell you of the mountains the staff climbed or the oceans we crossed to publish this book. Instead, I hope to inform you of the unique diversity of this Prospectus.

There have been many changes and alterations. The cover is abstract and different. The seniors have been moved towards the back. Homecoming is in color for the first time, and the coverage of faculty and students is more complete. This book certainly will recieve criticism, but will be remembered in the years to come as a trend-setter.

Change is needed. It is the essence of a good yearbook. It is its virality; its spark, its flame, its force; it is its very being. This book has that change. It could be said that there has been added, A Splash of Color.

In order for that change to occur, the brilliance of many had to be achieved. I would like to thank them all; my assistant editor, Marcella Quijencio, my staff, and my advisor, Mr. John Penn. Also thank you Brad Constantine, Rod Williams of Josrens, and Daryl Obayashi of Busco-Nestor Studios. A special thank you to the SCSPA workshop and Mr. John R. Beale. That is where the splash began.

"84" "Shay" Sharon Dean

You finally made it to your C/O Senior Year, and I am very happy for you we have lots of fun times together me, you, Tina, and Kendra, remember South Crest park when Cherie yelled the police was coming and they weren't, remember when me, you, Cherie, Gadon use to go up to the Arcade By 7-Eleven ya those were the kickin it days. And all that damn time Cherie's Ass was walking around getting fucked up with us and was Pregnant. That was the trip of the year when our little Nephew was born ya old Martell Charles Dean is fine. Sharon I could go on about all the things we've done together but it won't fit on this paper But you and I know what fun we had over the past 2½ years. They were exciting, experiencing, drastic, awsome, and fun. Remember Friday the 13th Oh Shit that was Something to remember. its alot of things you mustn't forget for our years together were just great. B-Down Nasta Blood (tricks) I'll always remember you hell I can't for get your ass I forgot about martells ass. Oh ya Remember us holding down this Campus homegirl later

"84" Love Ya Thanks for being around

Ronnie.

SHARON,
I'M REALLY GLAD I GOT TO MEET YOU THIS YEAR, TOO BAD IT WAS IN MS. ALVARADO'S CLASS. YOUR A REAL NICE PERSON AND I HOPE YOU DO WELL IN WHATEVER YOU TRY. HAVE A GOOD VACATION AND TAKE CARE, GOOD LUCK!

LOVE,
CHARLES
